NO MANCOVITZ VERDICT

DENOUNCE CURLEY'S DRIVE AT SCHOOLS

Boston is aroused by Mayor Curley's attempt to chop $147,000 out of the school fund to reduce the salaries of the men at the head of the school system and also to reduce the efficiency of the admittedly greatest school organization in the United States.

Curley says the city is poor, and attempts to rob the children of the municipality of their greatest asset—an opportunity to get the best education that Boston can buy. That is the view Boston's best citizens take of this newest move of the Mayor.

Joseph Lee of the School Committee today declared he was confident the salary of Superintendent of Schools Dyer would not be reduced. He was not impressed by the remarks of Mayor Curley that "the salary paid to the superintendent of schools is equal to that of the Mayor of the city."

The School Committee, as a whole, does not look kindly upon suggestions made by Mayor Curley recommending that the course in the city's high schools be changed from four to three years; in the grammar schools from eight to nine years, and that the salaries of Superintendent P. B. Dyer and his assistant superintendents be reduced.

Mr. Lee said today:

"I am unalterably opposed to

Accuse Curley with Coercion on Boston Loan Bill

Representative John L. Donovan today hinted at "coercion and browbeating" on the part of Mayor Curley in opposition to the bill to allow Boston to borrow $2,500,000 outside the debt limit, when reconsideration of the bill was moved in the House.

He said: "The Boston Representatives who voted against the bill did so through fear that the Mayor of Boston would discharge certain men in their districts.

"Good legislation ought not to be defeated on account or coercion and browbeating by Mayor Curley."

Foil Militant Raid on Asquith

NEWCASTLE, Eng., April 3.—When the train upon which Premier Asquith traveled to East Fife passed through here today a party of militant suffragettes tried to force their way into the compartment occupied by the statesman. A number of policemen were on duty at the station, and when the design of the women became known a fight followed. Several arrests were made.

Dowager Empress of Japan Dying

TOKIO, April 3.—Dowager Empress Haruko of Japan is reported to be dying at the imperial villa near Yokohama. She has been ill of angina pectoris.

WILL TELL OF SIEGEL ASSETS

Mrs. Marie Vaughn Wilde Siegel wife of Henry Siegel, the bankrupt banker and drygoods merchant, from whom she is seeking a divorce, is coming to Boston next week to testify before the Suffolk County Grand Jury. It was alleged that Siegel and his banking heads had done some juggling with the funds in the local bank.

Mrs. Siegel charged that her husband had concealed some of the assets of his business and that she had warned him he would get in trouble if he tried to conceal what did not belong to him. District Attorney Pelletier and his assistant, Thomas D. Lavelle, who are making a thorough investigation of the local troubles, both in the Siegel store and bank, have called Mrs. Siegel to Boston for the Grand Jury investigation.

The Grand Jury will go into session for the special sitting on the Siegel matters after the regular routine cases have been heard and reported on. Mrs. Siegel is expected here on Friday of next week.

Despite the allegations that District Attorney Whitman may ask for mercy for both Siegel and his partner, Vogel, if full restitution is made to the New York depositors, District Attorney Pelletier of Boston will continue with his investigation, and will present the facts to the Grand Jury.

If the evidence presented warrants indictments then the extradition of Siegel and Vogel would be asked for to Boston.

Pelletier has put five auditors to work on the Siegel books and papers.

Quick Work Saves Girl in Reservoir

Quick work by Frank Brown, an employe of the Edison Electric Company at the Waltham sub-station, saved the life of Margaret White, four years old, of Macks court, Waltham, who had fallen overboard while playing on the embankment at the Metropolitan Park Reservation near Moody street bridge. White heard the screams of the child and jumped into the reservoir.

Four Inches of Snow.

INTERLAKEN, N. Y., April 3.—Four inches of snow fell here early today, and the thermometer dropped twenty-four degrees.

MANCOVITZ JURY FAILS ON VERDICT

The jury in the David Mancovitz case reported a disagreement to Judge Morton in the United States District Court at 1:00 today, after being out twenty-two and one-quarter hours.

David Mancovitz is a well known lawyer and politician of Ward 8, which he has represented in the Lower Branch of the Legislature.

He was indicted last November by the Federal Grand Jury on charges of receiving $33,116 from Jacob Watchmaker of Revere, a bankrupt, with intent to defraud Watchmaker's creditors.

Watchmaker pleaded guilty to two indictments charging him and Mancovitz with conspiracy to conceal sums from Charles B. Jopp, trustee in bankruptcy.

Mancovitz pleaded not guilty and went to trial on March 19 in the United States District Court before Judge Morton and jury, on the charge of receiving money from Watchmaker after the filing of the latter's bankruptcy petition. Daniel J. Kiley and Damon E. Hall were counsel for Mancovitz. United States District Attorney Asa P. French prosecuted.

One of the chief witnesses for the government was Mrs. Watchmaker, who testified that Mancovitz came to her house and told her her husband had instructed him to get money which would be found in an old bureau drawer. Mrs. Mancovitz said she found and gave Mancovitz $2,250 and that he took away all but $50.

Chairman John R. Murphy of the Boston Finance Commission, who was senior counsel for Watchmaker, was called by the defence and was subjected to a long cross-examination by United States District Attorney French in which sharp replies figured. District Attorney Pelletier was also called as a witness. Watchmaker took the stand in his own behalf. The defence maintained that Mancovitz did his utmost to get Watchmaker to divulge his assets.

Appeals for Body of McCormick Boy

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—An appeal to the unknown person who is said to have secreted the body of missing eight-year-old Warren McCarrick, after the boy had been kicked to death by a horse, was issued today by the father of the lad. In the appeal, which was issued publicly, Mr. McCarrick asks that the man place the body in some spot and then notify himself or the police of its whereabouts.

Verrier at Calais in Monaco Flight

LONDON, April 3.—A second start was made today by Aviator Pierre Verrier in the 500-mile international race to Monaco. Leaving the Hendon aerodrome at 6 o'clock Verrier, accompanied by a mechanician, started at top speed for Dover. He reached Calais at 8 o'clock.

Free Driver Whose Truck Killed Woman

William L. Kilfoy, driver of the auto delivery wagon of a Boston department store which knocked down and fatally hurt Miss Katherine Feldirecton of Cambridge on the night of March 24, was discharged by Judge of Cambridge today after a hearing on the charge of manslaughter.

SLAYS TORREON WAR PRISONERS WITHOUT TRIAL

GOMEZ PALACIO, State of Durango, April 3.—More than 500 Federal prisoners are reported to have been massacred by General Villa's Constitutionalists after the fall of Torreon.

The lives of the Mexican regulars were spared, it is said, but the "Volunteers," who formerly fought in the Madero revolution and then went over to Huerta, were executed without trial.

The streets about the cuartel in Torreon red red with blood and soldiers were held in readiness to supplant their fellows in the firing squad when the latter became exhausted, according to the reports.

While the report of these wholesale executions is not officially confirmed, it is directly in line with Villa's practice and with his declaration made at the beginning of the campaign, that all Federal "volunteers" taken would be shot without quarter.

Villa purposely withheld news of the capture of the city to prevent his actions from being restricted through orders from his superior, General Carranza.

A fierce battle is in progress near San Pedro in Southern Coahuila. General de Moure, who was sent to the relief of General Velasco in Torreon, encountered a heavy body of Constitutionalists and was driving them back when the rebels received heavy reinforcements.

The troops under General Maas, which were sent to reinforce the Federal army at Torreon, have been surrounded seventy-five miles east of Torreon and may be cut to pieces.

"ON TO THE CAPITAL," VILLA'S WAR CRY NOW

JUAREZ, Mex., April 3.—Without giving his tired soldiers time to rest after the terrific eleven days' battle which resulted in the capture of Torreon, General Francisco Villa, commander-in-chief of the Constitutionalist forces, today ordered an immediate advance against Saltillo and Monterey, beginning his campaign for the capture of the capital itself.

ARMY OF VELASCO IS CRUSHED IN GREAT BATTLE OF TORREON

Even before General Villa wired news of the capture of Torreon to General Venustiano Carranza the provisional president of the Constitutionalists, he had begun sending troops eastward toward the two Federal strongholds.

"It was a glorious achievement," said Carranza. "No honor is too high for the chivalrous knight of liberty, General Villa. Our armies are invincible just as our cause is irreproachable. Mexico City is nearer than ever before."

According to dispatches received here from the rebel front the entire army of General Velasco, federal commander at Torreon, was wiped out save a few hundred men who escaped with Velasco during the darkness.

TOTAL LOSSES REACH 14,000.

In his official telegram, reporting the fall of Torreon, Villa says:

I have the honor to announce that after eleven days of severe fighting the Constitutionalist army which I have the honor to command is today (Friday) in undisturbed possession of Torreon, the last remnant of the Federal army having taken flight Thursday afternoon. I regret to say that General Velasco has escaped with an escort of a few men, but is being pursued by our cavalry. My losses will number 1,500 wounded and 500 dead. The Federal loss in killed, wounded and prisoners is fully 12,000.

A few minutes later this message was received.

"I regret to announce that among the wounded were General Pablo Robles and Calixto Contreras. Our loss in killed is 500. I congratulate and salute you with the respect and esteem that I always have had for you.

(Signed) "Your subordinate, General Francesco Villa, commander-in-chief."

General Tomas Urbina and General Monclovio Herrera, who were sent eastward from Torreon to intercept Federal reinforcements, were ordered to continue the march and invest Saltillo. They have about 3,500 men.

TORREON A CITY OF HORROR.

General Pablo Gonzales is leading a Constitutionalist force against Monterey and it is certain that the next great battle in northern Mexico will be fought around these two important cities.

Torreon is a city of ruins and horror. The buildings have been wrecked by shells and by fire and the streets are full of dead.

After securing control of the city the rebel soldiers were given the freedom of absolute licenses. Many were raving maniacs from their long vigil on the firing line, loss of sleep and the excitement of battle. Saloons were broken open and looted and a massacre of Federal prisoners followed. In brawls over loot many rebels were shot by their companions. Many of the rebel troops are so exhausted that they fell across the bodies of the dead and slept soundly for hours.

HUNDREDS OF BODIES BURNED.

As soon as daylight appeared Villa prepared two squads of troops to clean up Torreon and Gomez Palacio. The railroad line is being prepared and telegraph wires are being strung east of Torreon.

The irrigation ditches in the fields between Torreon and Gomez Palacio are being utilized as trenches. Hundreds of bodies too badly decomposed to be carried were burned.

As soon as Torreon fell thousands of camp followers, men, women and children poured into the blasted city and had been on the firing line less than an hour when a shrapnel shell exploded and his body was torn nearly in two.

There was wild rejoicing in Juarez today. A parade was held and Carranza was wildly cheered whenever he appeared in public.

BUGLE CALL OF VICTORY.

The question mark after the Torreon situation never loomed larger than last night. Early in the evening Carranza announced that the status at Torreon remained unchanged.

Then came the bugle call of victory. Mexicans recognized it in a flash, and the streets became thronged instantly.

"Vive Carranza."

"Viva Villa." "Viva Madero." "Viva" crying for food. Villa ordered that they be fed, after his troops had been supplied. The commissary department was soon exhausted and troops were sent to raid the neighboring ranches.

Among the Constitutionalist dead is Colonel Andres Gonzalez, member of the staff of General Chao, military governor of Chihuahua. He was in this city when the battle began at Torreon and begged to be allowed to go to the front. He died Monday night. Mexico' came the shouts of the crowd.

Inside, General Carranza and his confidential advisers were toasting Francisco Villa, the hero of the campaign.

Mayor Padres, realizing that some one must be calm, took occasion to order the saloons to close. A hundred processions formed in the streets and marched about shouting and cheering.

By Carranza's orders all the town was illuminated, soldiers of the garrison paraded and the military band played. The national salute was fired, church bells rung and whistles blown.

REPORT AWFUL BLUNDERS.

From stories told by the wounded it was learned that the first rebel advance on General Velasco's Federal garrison in Torreon and Gomez Palacio, the latter a suburb, resulted in a pitiable slaughter of the rebels, in which about 2,000 of them, partly through a series of blunders, were killed or wounded within a few hours.

All trustworthy accounts agree that the rebels' first attack was unsuccessful, and that their combined forces, although better equipped with field guns than they ever had been previously, and fully confident that they would frighten the Federals into a retreat, were forced to retire in the beginning of the fight.

First the rebels were reported to have blundered in opening fire on their own men. Two accounts were given for this mistake. One was that a column of rebel artillery trained over their mark and poured shells into the ranks of General Aguirre Benavide's force on the opposite side of Gomez Palacio. Another account was that a body of rebels entered Gomez Palacio without orders, and the rest of the army, thinking they were Federals, opened fire and killed many of their own number before the mistake was discovered.

BOMBS THROWN BACK.

A quantity of hand-bombs, made out of two-inch pipe, were provided with such poor fuses that the Federals were able to extinguish with water such of them as they did not throw back at the Rebels.

To add to the misfortunes of the Rebels' first attack—according to details gleaned from the wounded—they were lured into a part of Torreon under the impression that the Federals had fled. Then suddenly they discovered they were in direct fire of well-sheltered Federal guns, which proceeded to mow them down by the score. Many Rebels were wounded as they attempted to withdraw.

These were among the events that happened during the two days when the censor at the front refused to permit any messages to be transmitted north.

General Villa, before he left for the south, stated emphatically that when the assault on Torreon once began it would not last long, as he was prepared to fight it through without having to withdraw temporarily to rest his men.

The stubborn fight put up by the Federal garrison apparently has caused Villa to change his plans, for shipments of ammunition have been going south steadily.

Edward A. Fuentes, United States consular agent at Parral, was arrested by the Rebel authorities at Parral on a charge of counterfeits of the Rebel fiat money. Mr. Powers telegraphed to Marion Letcher, American consul there, of Consul Letcher is looking after their interests.

Passover Holiday for Jews in Service

Army and navy men of the Jewish faith will get a furlough for the observance of Passover next week, it was announced today. This is the result of the request of the Jewish Soldiers and Sailors' Passover Committee made to Secretary of War Garrison and Secretary of the Navy Daniels at Washington.

Woman Drowns from Gangplank; Holds Steward

William Mott, steward of barge No. 19 of the Consolidated Coal Company, is held at the Court Square police station today pending an investigation into the death of Miss Lillian Taylor, thirty-five, of No. 14 Compton street, South End, who fell into the water and was drowned off Foster's wharf while trying to board the barge on a gangplank.

Mott told the police he boarded the vessel ahead of the woman, who lost her balance and fell between the barge and the wharf. Captain Joshua Thomas and other members of the barge crew attempted to rescue her. Patrolman Sheahan of the Court Square station finally pulled her from the water with a boat hook.

First aid measures were administered without success and when the physicians from the Relief Hospital arrived she was pronounced dead. The members of the crew told their stories to the police and Mott was held on a charge of drunkenness pending the report of Medical Examiner Magrath.

MARKETMEN SCORE CURLEY IN M'KAY CASE

Mayor Curley's determination not to re-appoint Superintendent of Markets George E. McKay has aroused a storm of protest among the marketmen who have carried on their business under Mr. McKay's eyes during his thirty-seven years of efficient service.

Here are some of the things the marketmen say about Superintendent McKay—and remember that Mr. Curley is removing the superintendent with no reason whatever save politics.

Superintendent McKay played no favorites.

In thirty-seven years no complaint against him was ever taken to City Hall.

He didn't know the meaning of the word "graft."

He refused to play for political favor.

He never was too friendly or to antagonistic to any man to give that man a square deal.

He is more capable and efficient than he ever was.

Mayor Curley cannot find a better man in the world.

Those are only a few of the spirited comments by the marksmen in Faneuil Hall and Quincy Market. A storm of disapproval swept over the district. They declared that political reasons must be back of the Mayor's actions. There was talk of sending a round robin to the Mayor to protest against his proposed action.

FEAR TO SPEAK.

And there was an admitted feeling that no one had better speak too openly against the Mayor, for the Mayor's appointee to succeed Mr. McKay might be vengeance by making it exceedingly uncomfortable for any marketman under his supervision.

Mayor Curley gave no reason for his approval to remove Mr. McKay. He said, however, that he would appoint Patrick H. Graham of No. 57 Mount Vernon street, Ward 16. Mr. Graham is connected with the Democratic Ward Committee in Ward 16, is a personal friend of Mr. Curley's and has some political power. The salary of the McKay place Mayor Curley proposes to give his friend is $3,000 a year.

Mr. McKay himself was staggered by the word. Naturally, after thirty-seven years of service, he expected to continue so long as his efficiency continued, and, the marketmen say he is more efficient today than ever. He said:

BEYOND CRITICISM.

"I do not know why the Mayor is going to remove me. I had not heard of it before. I have been in my position thirty-seven years and all during that time I have not had a single complaint go to the Mayor against me.

"I don't believe that there is a firm in the market district or one that does business in the vicinity of the markets that would not endorse me for a reappointment. There has never been any criticism of my conduct in any shape or form.

One marketman commented: "The Mayor's plan to remove him without even inquiring into the feelings of the marketmen most affected by any change it absolutely indefensible and prompted by nothing but politics."

Mail Stolen on Liner.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—David Williams, a mess boy on the liner Ventura, is under arrest charged with the larceny of drafts, money orders, and Naval postmasters' checks, aggregating about $4,000 from the mail room of the ship.

SECOND SEALER MISSING WITH 173 ON BOARD

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 3.—Hearing the bodies of fifty-eight seamen of the sealer Newfoundland who perished in a gale on the ice floes of Belle Isle Strait, and about thirty-five survivors, the funeral ship Bellaventure crept toward this port today through fog and rain.

Emergency preparations were hurriedly made here to care for the frost bitten survivors in the General Hospital and the Grenfell Seamen's Institute.

There are still about twenty of the Newfoundland's crew unaccounted for.

The survivors huddled in an ice field for two days while a terrific gale of wind and snow smashed over them. Nearly all were unconscious from exposure when picked up by the crew of the Bellaventure and were given such first aid treatment as the ship afforded.

The dead seamen will probably be buried Sunday after services have been held in all the churches of the city.

Fears for the safety of the Southern Cross, another sealer, with 173 men on board, are increasing. She was reported early today as having arrived at Channel, N. F., but later reports say this report is not true. Her whereabouts are unknown.

Wireless messages brought word that the steamer Stephano had found one dead and two living members of the Newfoundland's crew while the Florizel had picked up five corpses.

The Bellaventure reported that another blizzard is sweeping down from the Labrador banks, following the fatal storm of Tuesday, and this increases fears for the Southern Cross and others of the sealing fleet which have not reported.

The Bellaventure also reported that Captain Wesley Kean of the Newfoundland was among the members of the vessel's crew still unaccounted for.

Suffering of an intensity that made death more desirable than life overtook the Newfoundland's crew in the ice floes. The men were caught six miles from the ship when the blizzard broke down upon the ice field. They were unable to fight their way back to the ship, which had to withdraw from its perilous position for fear of being crushed in the ice.

The snow was blinding, the weather far below zero, and the wind so high it nearly tore their clothing from their bodies. They were trapped on a treacherous field of ice which threatened to break up any minute.

Rat Poison Spray Brings More Rats

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 12.—Mrs. Lena A. Morrill filed a $5,000 damage suit against the city today on the ground that a city dump adjoining her property on South street attracts rats. Early in the week the Board of Health, hearing reports of her threatened suit, sprayed the dump with rat poison. Since then, it is reported, the rats have increased.

Maid in Court on Charge of Arson

Mary Keeler, the nineteen-year-old maid in the home of William E. Fuller of Newtonville, who was arrested yesterday by the Newton police charged with attempting to set fire to her employer's house because he had discharged her, was in court today before Judge Cornell. The case was continued until April 8. Bail of $500 was allowed.

Deny 'Safety' Control by Special Interests

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Denial that the American commission to the London conference of safety at sea has represented special interests, was made to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations today by Representative J. W. Alexander, chairman of the commission. The charge was made by Andrew Furseth of the International Seamen's Union.

Berkshire Maple Sugar in Congress

WASHINGTON, April 3.—A box containing more than 200 pounds of genuine maple sugar from the past month's production of the Berkshire Hills was received at the office of Representative Treadway of Massachusetts today. The New England representative distributed the shipment to his friends.

To Testify Against 60-Year-Old Pastor

NEW YORK, April 3.—Eight members of his congregation were prepared today to give testimony against Rev. Dr. Jacob Embury Price, the 60-year-old pastor of the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, who was being secretly tried before a special committee of the New York Methodist Episcopal conference. The charge against Rev. Dr. Price is of improper conduct toward certain women members of his parish.

Appeals Fine in eTamsters' Strike

The first arrest made in the strike of the teamsters employed by the Empire Grocery Company, Commercial street, was made today in in Charlestown when Hyman Ozen of No. 116 Everett avenue, Chelsea, was arraigned in the Charlestown District Court on charges of disturbing the peace and intimidation. Ozen was fined $5 on the first charge and $20 on the second. He appealed the latter.

Shoplifters Sentenced.

Daniel Sexton was given one year in the House of Correction, and John W. Seymour, an accomplice, was fined $10 in the Municipal Court today for shoplifting in a department store.

SWEETHEART DENIES TIFF WITH LOST GIRL

The Dorchester police, who are striving to fathom the mystery of Laura B. Harlowe's disappearance, questioned for over an hour John Swift of No. 20 Charles street, Dorchester, the girl's fiance.

Miss Harlowe disappeared Tuesday last. Swift told the police that he was probably the last person to see her alive.

Captain Michael Crowley of Dorchester has his entire force of 123 men at work on the case, and eight detectives under Patrick J. Williams are scouring the Neponset River district for clews or for any trace of the girl's body, if she committed suicide.

The police of Greater Boston are co-operating with the work. Miss Harlowe's sister, Annie, believes the girl is a suicide. "She has often threatened to kill herself," she said. The police, however, are not ready to accept this theory.

Swift is heart-broken at his fiancee's disappearance. "I'm hunting for her, and I won't stop searching till I find her," he declared today, with tears in his eyes.

"I was the last to see her. She left my car at Field's Corner, Tuesday night, to take a Neponset car. She said she was going to her milliner in Neponset. But she never got there.

"I have no idea what moved her to kill herself, or to run away. There is no truth in the report that we had quarrelled. We had a misunderstanding two week ago; but that was all straightened out and we were as good friends as ever last Sunday.

"I cannot believe she has killed herself. I believe she will be found; and I never will rest till I know."

Julia Meyer Now Wears "Handcuffs"

WASHINGTON, April 3.—"Handcuff" bracelets, composed of two plain platinum bands, worn on both wrists and connected by hanging platinum chains, are being worn by Miss Julia Meyer, daughter of Mr and Mrs. George Von L. Meyer. They do not interfere with the freedom of the hands. The chains are long enough to allow Miss Meyer to go through even the most difficult figure of the maxixe, at which she is an expert.

HUNT AUTO FOR BROOKLINE GEM THEFT CLEWS

The Brookline police are today seeking thieves who ransacked the home of Edwin J. Dreyfus at No. 34 Beech street, Brookline, while the family was dining. Entrance was gained by climbing a porch in the rear of the house and getting through a window on the second floor.

The details of the robbery were much like those of the theft of the Hannan jewels at Narragansett Pier last Summer, as the thieves came in an auto and were porch-climbing specialists.

The thieves worked quickly and so quietly that their presence in the house was not suspected. Half an hour later when Mr. Dreyfus had occasion to go upstairs he found his wife's room in disorder. He searched and discovered that nearly all the small valuables, worth $500, were missing.

While the family were at dinner an automobile drew up near the house. Some time later the family heard the machine depart, but thought nothing of it. Mr. Dreyfus is convinced the thieves came in the machine. It was later discovered the men hired the auto in Boston and a hunt for the owner and driver is being made by the police.

Judge Gives Limit to Erring Merchant

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 3.—Willis H. Porter, well known merchant, was fined $100 and costs by Justice Cresswell, when convicted by a jury of contributing to the delinquency of a minor child. "A man who steals money from a bank can save and ultimately return it," Cresswell told the defendant, "but a man who steals the virtue of a girl can only be fined. The law is unjust. I give you the limit." Porter paid.

QUEEN MARY IS REAL POWER IN ULSTER CRISIS

LONDON, April 3.—Queen Mary is the real power on the English throne. This fact was revealed during the Ulster crisis, when King George was terribly agitated. The Queen, however, kept her head when those about her were losing theirs.

She was consulted by Prime Minister Asquith and by other members of the cabinet. Some of these are said to have declared they wished she was openly the head of affairs, like Queen Victoria a few years ago.

When the crisis was at its height a few days ago, she declined dinner with Lord and Lady Farquhar, sending back the list of guests with a personally written note explaining she was unable to attend a function that was merely social during "this critical period in the King's reign when the country seems on the eve of revolution."

Two-thirds of the guests were put off by telephone and the dinner party was small. The only American attending was Lady Alastair Innes Ker, formerly Miss Anne Breese of New York, who was the life and soul of the party and unmercifully chaffed ex-premier Balfour on his "just doing nothing at all" politically, which he took in good part in a quiet, amused way.

VORENBERG'S

SECRETARY BRYAN WHINES FOR TOLLS REPEAL IN SENATE

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Bowing and bobbing, Secretary Bryan was at the Capitol yesterday and today going in and out among the Senators like a quail through standing grass.

Ostensibly, Mr. Bryan's purpose was to talk peace treaties with the Foreign Affairs Committee. In truth, he was there to whine and whisper in the ears of doubtful ones among the Senate Democrats concerning the iron-bound necessity of closing the canal against American coastwise ships in accord with the desires of Mr. Wilson and his English friends.

Mr. Bryan didn't like his assignment. He was at the Senate whispering "canal" only because Mr. Wilson insisted. It is the Wilson policy to make Mr. Bryan face every risk that he, Mr. Wilson, faces, it being no part of the White House policy to permit Mr. Bryan to become popular at the Wilson expense.

BRYAN AFTER WILSON'S JOB.

Mr. Wilson knows that Mr. Bryan is intriguing for the next Democratic presidential nomination; also Mr. Bryan does all of his talking upon the assumption that Mr. Wilson does not believe in and will not accept a second term.

Mr. Wilson himself has said as much, but he had hoped that no one would believe it. No one did believe it; no one believes it now, but Mr. Bryan, for his own advancement finds it convenient to take or pretend to take Mr. Wilson at his word.

All of the Bryan comings in and goings out are upon the theory that Mr. Wilson will insist upon being a one-term President. In the face of his own words, however, to say nothing of Mr. Bryan's hopes, Mr. Wilson intends to run again.

The result is that both he and Mr. Bryan are compelled, in each other's presence, to a deal of pretending. Mr. Wilson pretends that he isn't thinking of a second nomination, when in fact he isn't thinking of anything else.

BRYAN WHITE HOUSE GOAT.

Mr. Bryan pretends that his first loyalty is to Mr. Wilson, when in fact he is studying days and dreaming nights how best to cripple him. Mr. Bryan has more than once complained that it is the constant White House-Wilson-Tumulty habit to make him (Bryan) the goat.

When blame, no praise, is flying there is ever the White House hint abroad that Mr. Bryan is the guilty man. So says Mr. B. He is the Jorkins of the administration, and Spenlow-Wilson is forever pointing to him as the wicked partner. As a result the political woods are full of folk who blame Mr. Bryan for what Mr. Wilson himself has done or failed to do.

ATTACK ON VOPICA.

Minister Vopica represents us at the Courts of Roumania, Servia and Bulgaria. Mr. Vopica is a Chicago brewer. Certain kilu-dried Prohibitionists have protested against him to Mr. Wilson.

Recently a story with a Bucharest date line was printed in a New York paper making it appear that Minister Vopica was socially so crude, coarse and ungraceful as to unfit him for the place. Friends of Minister Vopica have back-tracked this story. It came from the administration itself, who hoped thereby to open a way to oust Mr. Vopica into other diplomatic darkness.

When that eminent malster's friends talked with Mr. Wilson he professed ignorance, and pointed to Mr. Bryan. When Minister Vopica is told to resign, Mr. Wilson will so arrange the drama as to leave Mr. Bryan responsible. The Prohibitionists will give Mr. Wilson credit. With the friends of Mr. Vopica, Mr. Bryan will reap the odium of that dismissal.

Mr. Bryan knows these things, while unable to defend himself. Alas, he bewails his scapegoat fate among intimate friends.

BRYAN'S THREAT TO RESIGN.

Mr. Bryan intends to resign his portfolio in event of a hostile entry into Mexico. He has told this to Mr. Wilson. War would be inconsistent with his platform protestations. That is his given reason.

The Nobel prize of $40,000 is his real reason. Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Root, and Mr. Benn for Carnegie, have given Mr. Bryan to understand that next year's Nobel $40,000 prize shall go jingling into the Bryan capacious pockets and Mr. Bryan does not mean to jeopardize so auriferous an outlook.

WILSON'S "SILENT PARTNER."

There's one gentleman—he's the mystery of the administration whom Mr. Bryan is trying to bring to his side. It is Mr. House of Texas. Mr. H. has been spoken of as "the silent partner of Mr. Wilson."

Worth millions upon the back of millions, the mysterious Mr. House is described as liking power without liking office. He delights in being the force behind the throne. Also, he seems to be it in the present enthroned instance of Mr. Wilson.

Wise men will tell you that Mr. House named five of Mr. Wilson's Cabinet. Sure it is he goes into the White House whenever moved by the spirit and Mr. Wilson sees him and talks with him when he'll see and talk with no other man.

The mysterious Mr. House of Texas has bit the surface more often than once in connection with Mr. Wilson's pro-English efforts to close the canal.

Some have even said that Mr. House represented Lord Cowdray in his Tampico oil and Tehuantepec Railroad. However that may be, he is as much at home in the White House as Mr. Wilson himself.

Hundreds of New Spring Suits for Women Here at $18.50 and $20

Fine suits, well made, with the newest of collars and ruffles and paniers, or with the new very much modified. Gay or grave colors—new poplins, cords and gabardines, and plenty of blue serges.

The sketch shows a serge suit that fits almost everyone. The coat is short; the wired Japanese collar is of gay colored satin. The tunic has two box pleats in back. It is $18.50.

Another suit at $18.50 that is very new indeed has a ruffled panier, and flaring cuffs and cape collar of moire. The coat hangs in a full flare in back. Sketched.

At $20 are suits in fancy checks. The coats are short in front; the backs are long and square, and belted way across. The tunics follow the square line of the coat. Sketched.

A conservatively made blouse suit at $20 is of fine serge. The sleeves are set into deep armholes that go from waist to shoulder. The tunic is short in front and long in back. Sketched.

The Women's $25 Suit Shop has half a hundred carefully chosen styles, each in a range of materials, colors and sizes.

Other suits to $250. Especially wide choice at $35.

Vacation Week in the Juvenile Shops

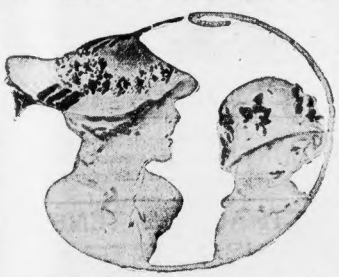
This is certainly the store for Young Folk.

What other store can show a group of eleven specialty shops, each with its own expert organization, devoted to the correct clothing of girls between six and eighteen years—

With another group of shops (on the Men's floor) exclusively for Brother—

And a wonderful group on yet another floor for all children under six years?

All these shops will be at their best VACATION WEEK.



Every one of the Juvenile Shops is brimfull and running over with good clothes for school, sports and parties.

In the Misses' Suit Shop alone are 280 new suits at $18.50, $25 and $35, every one of which would sell ordinarily for several dollars more. These in addition to the overflowing regular Easter stock.

No reason, little Miss School-or-College Girl, why you can't find here all the things you'll need for the rest of the term, and incidentally stretch the clothing allowance.

Misses' and Girls' Flexible Flyer Shoes

The soles are of chrome tanned leather that seem to resist wearing out. The boots are $3 and $3.50; the oxfords are $2.50 to $3.50.

Misses' New Pumps

"Corinthian" pumps of patent and gun metal leather. With two bars over the vamp that go well with colored stockings. White canvas pumps, with medium heels and toes are $3.25.

Misses' and Girls' Street Shoes

One-eyelet sailor ties with low, flat heels and medium toe, $4. "Guardian" oxfords, brown, black kid and patent, $2.65 to $3.65.

Misses' and Girls' Dress Boots

Misses' patent boots with white kid or brown suede tops are $4 and $5. White Buck Boots for Girls are $3.75 and $4.50.

HEIRESS TRIED TO ELOPE WITH GLENN COLLINS

BALTIMORE, April 3. — Captain Charles Glenn Collins' latest adventure in romance and finance has been an unsuccessful attempt to elope with Miss Amelia Wheeler, daughter of Samuel Wheeler, the sewing machine capitalist, who has a home in a suburb of Chicago. She ran away from her home three times in efforts to meet the dashing English officer, who was divorced by the former Miss Natalie Schenck, whose second husband, S. Osgood Pell, was killed in an automobile accident near Long Beach, N. Y.

Despite the fact that she has been watched day and night by detectives engaged by her father, Miss Wheeler has managed to elude them, and at once made her way to this city, before being intercepted. While most capitalists with daughters soon to marry are planning vast sums to that end, Mr. Wheeler already has spent thousands of dollars in thwarting the matrimonial plans of his daughter and is prepared to spend many thousands more.

The first time Miss Wheeler made a dash for this city she was caught at the Pennsylvania Railroad's station in Chicago, after her father's chauffeur, who took her there, guessed her intention and telephoned to Mr. Wheeler.

Her second flight took place six weeks ago. She said she was going to attend a ball, and left her room attired in an evening gown, with a thin traveling skirt and a crushed felt hat tied around her waist under a long coat. Before her departure was discovered she was well on her way to this city. But detectives got on the trail of Collins and stuck so close that the marriage was blocked.

EMMY'S GREAT LOVE PROBLEM SOLVED!

Will this mercenary little beauty, who early in life determined to win a wealthy husband, love or no love, marry the aged millionaire, or will she surrender her determination and marry the young man she really wants? PRELATES AT FUNERAL OF BISHOP NILES

CONCORD, N. H., April 3.—Three thousand passed through St. Paul's Church, where the body of the Rt. Rev. William W. Niles, Episcopal bishop, lay in state for two hours preceding his funeral today. The services started at 11 o'clock. Hundreds were unable to gain an entrance.

The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, senior bishop of Massachusetts, headed the list of bishops present. He was assisted by the Rt. Rev. Robert Codman, bishop of Maine; Rt. Rev. Frederick J. Kinsman, bishop of Delaware; Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Davies, bishop of Western Massachusetts; Rt. Rev. Samuel C. Babcock, suffragan bishop of Massachusetts, and the Rt. Rev. Bishop Edward M. Parker, who succeeds the deceased as bishop of New Hampshire.

The pupils of St. Paul's School attended in a body. Burial was in the cemetery of St. Paul's School, where Bishop Niles' two sons are buried.

CITIZENS AROUSED BY CURLEY'S ATTACK ON BOSTON SCHOOLS

Mayor Curley's recommendation concerning the reduction of Superintendent Dyer's salary to $5,000 a year. I don't believe that the Mayor himself will insist upon the change being made, now that he has been told just how the matter stands.

Aside from the fact that we could not honorably consider such a thing because of the conditions obtaining when Superintendent Dyer came to Boston, I chance to know that he has been offered $10,000 a year by the Pittsburgh School Committee if he will go there.

Superintendent Dyer is one of the ablest men in the country. He is worth every penny that the city now pays him. His salary will not be reduced, or that I am confident.

DR. THOMAS F. LEE, a former member of the School Committee—Two of the changes urged upon the School Committee by Mayor Curley are impossible, under the law. The committee is compelled by statute to appoint to employ six assistant superintendents. Civil service regulations for janitors and other employes also prevent the adoption of his transfer-from-other-departments recommendation.

There is before the Legislature, however, a measure designed to permit the committee to exercise its judgment as to the number of assistant superintendents employed. But I know of no way in which the transfer of janitors and nurses could be effected from other departments. I hold that such a thing would be highly undesirable in any event.

Mayor Curley's recommendation to reduce the number of grades in the high schools to three, and to increase them in the grammar schools to nine, on the other hand, is not new by any means. I favored the change while a member of the School Committee, officially, and still do, but that it would be a step in the right direction.

SUSAN W. FITZGERALD, secretary of the School Voters' League—Mayor Curley's proposal to have janitors and nurses transferred from other departments to the schools, regardless of the civil service rules, is wrong in principle and illegal in practice. Such a course savors of the spoils system. It will never meet with the approval of the citizens.

I am also opposed to his plea for the reduction of Superintendent Dyer's salary to $5,000 a year. Everyone conversant with the school situation, nationally, knows that Superintendent Dyer is worth far more than he now receives. To talk of reducing his salary is absurd. He ought to be given a substantial increase, and a free rein to work out such efficiency plans as he has in mind.

As regards the assistant superintendents, so called, I am inclined to think that we would be better served with three high-grade men, at very much larger salaries than those now paid the six holding office. But even in this instance, children, and not economy, should be the determining factor. Our school system is the arch-stone upon which rests the entire structure of our government. We cannot safeguard it too carefully.

DR. HUGH CABOT, Back Bay physician, educator and psychologist—This action of Mayor Curley's is inconceivable in a city like Boston, which prides itself on the educational attainments. What can Mr. Curley be thinking of? All of our school officials are woefully underpaid. Everybody with any sense knows that.

The heads of our school system —not to mention the teaching force as a whole—do not get half enough salary at the present time. Twenty-five thousand dollars a year at the very least would be little enough to pay the superintendent of schools of a city such as this.

Education of our future citizens is much more important than executive management of our city. A man like Superintendent Dyer ought to get ten times as much as the mere mayor of a city.

When you pause to consider the relative importance of the two offices, that of the Mayor of the city of Boston—or any other city for that matter—sinks into comparative insignificance alongside of the tremendously important task of training the children of a great city.

I am in favor of increasing the pay of every member of the educational department of the city.

No thinking person who is truly interested in the future welfare of the city of Boston will for a moment entertain Mayor Curley's untimely suggestion.

And as for the minor details of the care of the school grounds and buildings, I feel that we can safely assume that the School Committee, with whom we entrust this work, is better able to attend to the appointment of care-takers, nurses, scrub-women, and the like than is the Mayor himself.

If we are to have a School Committee we must assume that they know their business. Let Mayor Curley stick to his.

MRS. GEORGE W. COLEMAN, president of the School Voters' League—The suggestions made by Mayor Curley to the School Committee are all sweeping in character, that I simply can't discuss them in detail without further thought. They no doubt will be taken up at the next League meeting, a week later, and gone into thoroughly.

His suggestion that Superintendent Dyer's salary be reduced $5,000 a year surprises me. I can't understand why it was made at this time.

Dr. David I. Scannell of the School Committee said today Boston was "in honor bound to pay Superintendent Dyer $10,000 a year." Dr. Scannell intimated there was little likelihood of the suggestions of the Mayor being carried out.

Dr. Dyer, he explained, had been brought to Boston from Cincinnati with the assurance he would receive $10,000 for six years. Thus, said Dr. Scannell, the city was in honor bound to pay him that salary. Speaking of the Mayor's suggestions with regard to the changes in the number or years for high and grammar school courses, he said:

"This is out of the Mayor's province. The curriculum of the schools is a matter over which the School Committee only has authority."

Chairman Brock of the School Committee holds views similar to those of Dr. Scannell. In speaking of the possibility of a reduction in the salaries of the assistant superintendents or of their removal, he said that was a matter over which the committee had full power and one which would not be considered until some time in June.

Plan Warehouse Worth Millions Here

A $1,000,000 terminal warehouse, nine stories in height, with a ground area of 70,000 square feet, is planned to be built in Commercial street, between Prince and Hull streets. Twenty-five representatives of wholesale corporations met in the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to discuss the project.

DENY EXPERTS CHARGE OF TEACHERS' PENSION FUND INSOLVENCY

"The Boston Teachers' Retirement Fund is insolvent," declares the Massachusetts Legislative Commission on Pensions.

"The fund can never be insolvent," replies Secretary Alfred Bunker. "I cannot understand how this commission could make such a mistake, for our books are open and the law is plain."

The Boston Teachers' Retirement Fund is a co-operative association run by the teachers themselves. It has 2,600 members. Its income is secured by the arrangement with the City of Boston by which $18 per year is deducted from each teacher's pay in the Boston public schools, and turned over to the fund.

Teachers who have served thirty years are paid by the fund an annuity of $150. There are 260 pensions at present and the fund has been in operation nearly ten years.

Actuaries employed by the Pension Commission have been busy upon the books of the society and report that under the present arrangement the retirement fund will fail to come up to the expectations of the teachers now paying $18 in the hope of an annuity of $150 by more than one million dollars.

INDIGNANT DENIAL.

Secretary Alfred Bunker of the Teachers' Retirement Fund indignantly denies that the institution is in any difficulty and declares that with $260,000 in the treasury and the annual income of nearly $50,000, the fund will have no trouble in meeting all obligations for many years to come.

"And this fund can never be bankrupt," said the secretary, "since the act under which it was created provided that our total disbursements for pensions should never exceed the total receipts of the society. We could reduce the amount of our disbursements to meet our income," he explained, "and thus could never be bankrupt.

"It is true," declares the Legislative Commission, "that the fund could reduce its pensions from $150 per year to 75 per year and be within the law, but the teachers are paying their eighteen dollars with the expectation of getting $150 per year, and some of them will never get it unless the system is radically changed."

PENSION FUND CRISIS.

Not only is the Teachers' Retirement Fund insolvent but the Teachers' pension fund, paid by the city, is also insolvent if any city institution can be insolvent. The city pension fund is paid out of five cents added to the annual tax rate. The actuaries of the commission report that it is going to take twenty-five cents on the tax rate per year instead of five cents to pay the teachers.

The curious situation of the Teachers' Retirement Fund is that it is a private society supported by contributions taken by the city out of the teachers' salaries. This makes the city morally and legally responible for the solvency of the Teachers' Fund and will compel the city to make arrangements which will put it upon a business basis.

The Teachers' Fund is declared to be as illogical as the endless chain schemes—somebody is obliged to get left. It is true that for some years the annual income will exceed the money paid out in pensions, but the younger teachers will never get their pensions unless the system is changed, according to the Pension Commission.

The trouble with the Teachers' Retirement Fund is that it was not planned upon true vital and financial statistics, according to the Pension Commission.

FEAR SWAMPING.

Every year more teachers are reaching the pension age, while the 250 pensioners will not die nearly as fast as additions are made. The annual income is about $47,000 and the annual expenditure is $45,000. When the pensioners number 300 the annual expenditure will be $54,000, and then the surplus accumulated during the early years of the institution will be encroached upon. There will come a year when there will be no more surplus, and then bankruptcy.

Mr. Bunker does not believe that the death rate will not protect the fund and save the surplus, but the experts declare that the contrary is the case and eventual bankruptcy is sure unless the annual assessment is raised to cover the deficit.

The argument is that when all the 2,600 teachers now on the payroll or pensioner roll have passed off the active list enough of them will be living to swamp the Retirement Fund.

As the City Pension Fund was founded on the same incomplete plan it is also doomed to be swamped unless the rate is tremendously lifted.

J. A. SULLIVAN IS REAL MAYOR, SAYS DONOVAN

"The real Mayor of Boston is not James M. Curley, but John A. Sullivan," declared John L. Donovan of Boston in the House while debating his amendment to the bill raising the limit for interest on Boston loans from 4 to 4½ per cent. Donovan wanted to fix the rate at 4 per cent.

"I wish to say I was with Mayor Curley in his campaign. I also wish to say that he has turned his back on his old friends and joined the goo-goo's."

Donovan's amendment was defeated.

WELLESLEY GIRLS SCORE IN COMEDY PLAY

When sixteen girls of the Junior class at Wellesley presented "Beau Brummel," a comedy in four acts, at the Cort Theatre, the students of Wellesley College took their first step to aid the college to recover from its crippled condition caused by the burning of College Hall.

The comedy, which will be repeated today, was a success in every respect. From the sale of tickets more than $1,100 was raised, and from the sale of advertising space in the program fully $1,600 more was added.

Only five of the sixteen girls played feminine parts.

The guests of the Junior class were Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president of the college; Miss Olive Davis, head of College Hall; Miss Mary Fraser Smith, who saved the valuable records that were in College Hall, Miss Annis Ware, secretary to the registrar of the college; Miss Mary Snow, head of Pomeroy Hall, and Miss Florence I. Tucker.

Selling flowers and candy in the lobby of the theatre were the Misses Eleanor Piper, Madeline Piper, Margaret Mills, Esther Pepper, Helen White, Thelma Burbank, Silence Mc-Vey, Ina Jacobs, Helen Hutchins, Helen Bates, Marion Hammond and Marion Berry. Selling programs were the Misses Marian Locke, Dorothy Rhodes, Alice Shumway and Beatrice Ufield.

Following is the cast:

Beau Brummel ..... Tracy L'Engle
The Prince of Wales ..... Hildegarde Jones
Richard Brinsley Sheridan ..... Elsie Norton
Lord Maitland ..... Clarke Travers
Reginald Courtenay ..... Florence Bartlett
Mr. Brummel ..... Dorothy Adams
Mr. Brabantzon ..... Georgia Nicolls
Sergeant ..... Marion Mills
Bailiff ..... Myrtle Davis
Bailiff ..... Bowen Nye
Prisoner's Footman ..... Gladys Smith
Oliver Vincent ..... Jeanette Flerlage
Marianna Vincent ..... Lucie Young
Kathleen ..... Florence Keenan
The Duchess of Leamington ..... Margaret Argyle
Lady Farthingale ..... Marion Mills
French Singing Housemaid ..... Georgia Pollard
Mrs. St. Aulyn ..... Dorothy Huggins

Sentence Bride, 13, as Stubborn Child

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 3.—A thirteen-year-old Worcester girl, two days married, was sent today to the State Industrial School as a stubborn child after husband is sought on a white-slave charge. The girl is Alice Penniman, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude W. Newman, wife of Ernest L. Marsh, an engineer.

Road Builder Fined $50 for Slow Work

The Framingham Construction Company was fined $50 by Judge Maguire in Woburn District Court for violating the forty-eight hour law in building the Woburn-Winchester boulevard. The complaint was made by Inspector Elmer I. Christenson of the State Board of Labor and Industry.

Window Cleaner Falls Three Stories

While cleaning windows on the third floor of the Wellington School on Columbia street, Cambridge, Joseph Monahan of No. 9 Charles street, Boston, lost his balance. He was picked up from the concrete pavement and rushed to Cambridge Relief Hospital where his name is on the dangerous list.

Roberts Will Send Judge Bruce Seeds

Representative Roberts at Washington has arranged to send 500 packages of government seeds to Judge Bruce of the Municipal Court, Medford. These are to be used by him to interest wayward children in the cultivation of unoccupied city lots.

Harry Beach Missing.

After handing his wife his week's wages last Sunday, Harry Beach, twenty-five, left his home at No. 12 Whittier place, Roxbury, and has not been seen since.

A SOUR STOMACH GAS, INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all Stomach distress in five minutes—Time it!

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand how every trouble or ill of kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes.

"Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy. Every sick dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you eat to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia or sour stomach misery.

Do not—now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

ARREST TWO IN VERMONT DEATH PROBE

Vermont State detectives will leave for Washington today to secure papers for the extradition of Giuseppe and Giovanni Colombo, brothers, held at Pozzallo, Siracusa, Sicily, charge with the murder of Henry W. Ward, eighty-two, who was robbed and slain in his barn at New Haven Junction, Vt., on December 9, 1910.

The arrest of the two men followed a pursuit of thirty-nine months and was brought about by Attorney-General R. E. Brown of Burlington, Vt., and State's Attorney F. W. Tuttle of Addison County, Vt., with the assistance of a private detective agency.

The Colombo brothers were working as members of a section gang on the railroad and disappeared following the murder. They were traced to New York and thence to Europe. The Vermont authorities, through Washington, will attempt to have them extradited and, failing to do so, will press the charges in Italy.

It's Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets for You!

Beware of the habit of constipation. It develops from just a few constipated days, unless you take yourself in hand.

Coax the jaded bowel muscles back to normal action with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Don't force them to unnatural action with severe medicines or by merely flushing out the intestines with nasty, sickening cathartics.

Dr. Edwards believes in gentleness, persistency and nature's assistance.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets open the bowels; their action is gentle, yet positive. There is never any pain or griping when Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are used. Just the kind of treatment old persons should have.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two occasionally and have no trouble with your liver, bowels or stomach. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. All druggists. —ADVERTISEMENT.

Sheehan Pleads for School Board Reform

Representative John F. Sheehan of Boston, who seeks to prevent more than one member of the Boston School Board coming from a single ward, told the legislative Committee on Education that the Public School Association is able to spend thousands of dollars at each election, that poor candidates are defeated and that three-fifths of the school committee has come yearly from Ward 11.

Senate Turns Down Curley Police Cut

The Senate by an almost unanimous vote refused to admit Mayor Curley's bill to allow him to reduce the pay of policemen whose salaries were raised by Mayor Fitzgerald. The defeat of the bill was a direct slap at the Mayor, as it has been the almost universal custom to admit bills desired by city executives as a matter of courtesy.

In Tangled Webs.

A Story in Two Parts.

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

Frank Fraser.....M. Dumery
Leon Richards.....F. Dulray
Dorothy, his daughter..Mlle. Ducret

A Scene from "In Tangled Webs."

PART I.

CHAPTER I.

The trouble with a past is that it is always present. So far as conscience went, Frank Fraser, at forty, looked back without regret or remorse upon his past sins. It was the present inconvenience o them that made life a burden.

Fraser had never done any work in his life, and never intended to. Even now, with his debts piled to the limit of his credit and downright poverty staring him in the face, the thought of going to work—or earning money in any honest way—never even occurred to him. He had lived on his father's fortune until that was squandered; then he had lived by his wits. Now, as he sat at his table and read his gloomy mail, he knew that even his wits would not serve to offset such little missives as this:

Mr. Frank Fraser:

I regret to be unable to advance the loan you request. You told me recently that your marriage was about to take place, after which you would pay the money now due me, but I have not heard of your wedding, and do not care to grant any further favors.

SAMUEL LAMBERT.

Lambert had been Fraser's mainstay for a long time. He had begun taking his toll of the Fraser fortune before the young man had inherited it. He had waited patiently for old Fraser's death to collect his money and his interest.

Of late the announcement of the engagement of Frank Fraser to Dorothy Richards, daughter of the great financier, Leon Richards, had inspired the crafty heart of Lambert with new "generosity." But he had begun to be wary. This last loan that Fraser had asked was for only $1,000, and it was refused. As he tore through the batches of bills and dunning letters the worried man was on the verge of desperation.

The one cheerful thing in the mail—the daily little letter from Dorothy—he passed over without reading. He had begun to be afraid that before the wedding day was set his bankrupt state would be exposed to all the world, and, worse, that the ways which had led him into that state would be revealed also.

Suddenly he thrust all the papers aside and sprang to his feet.

"It's the only chance," he muttered. "I haven't played in a long time; I ought to be lucky.

CHAPTER II.

That day was a perfect embodiment of the man's dual life.

Stately, composed and gracious, with the studied arts of gentility that evil habits had never impaired, he arrived as usual at Elmwood in the afternoon.

Dorothy Richards met him at the outer gate—a sweet, serious girl of twenty-three years.

Arm in arm they strolled to the house. Old Mr. Richards stepped out to greet his future son-in-law cordially but briefly, and returned again to his study. He was very well pleased with the match. The Frasers were one of the first families in New York, and he had no idea that this dilettante gentleman, who talked as keenly of politics and business as of cravats and dances, had sent old John Fraser's fortune flying.

Dorothy was blind with the gentle blindness of a girl in love. Fraser had exercised a compelling power over her from the moment of their first meeting. He played his part with a master's skill. He was admired and respected as well as adored by the girl. Perhaps if Dorothy's mother had been alive the elder woman's eyes would have read more truly the man who professed to love her daughter, while all he sought was the fortune she would bring him. But Dorothy had lived and grown up alone with a busy father for companion. She had been sheltered from all that was unpleasant or sordid. There was no suspicion in her.

Fraser left her waving her hand to him from the gate. The call had been the glory of her day; it had been his boredom.

From the soft, tender arms that had nestled on his shoulders for the moment of farewell he sped without a qualm to Gullet's. He transposed himself into his other character, rather into his real self. Within an hour after he had whispered his endless devotion to the girl who trusted him he was staking his last hundred dollars at the gaming table.

That was what he had meant when in the morning he had cried: "It's the only chance." It was no whim of the moment. It was a deliberate, if desperate, plan to win back his comfort and peace of mind or lose all.

CHAPTER III.

Fraser won.

Fate seemed suddenly to have changed her fickle mind. At the crowded table in Guillot's spacious palace of chance, where men and women mingled in the cruel sexless passion of gain, he saw his hundred dollars leap to a thousand in a moment.

Alice Augarde was at his elbow encouraging him. Alice Augarde had been a companion of his old wild days—one of the many who had fallen away from him with the failing away of his fortune. Alice Augarde was quite willing to welcome him back to the field—if he could win like that.

A swift round of the cards—they were playing the simple little game of Twenty-one, with stakes that reached far into the thousands—and Fraser sprang to his feet excitedly. He had won $15,000 at a stroke—on the fall of a card. His total winnings were more than $25,000.

Visions of a new life thrilled his brain. He was rich, he was safe; he could do as he pleased again. He would not have to hasten the day of his marriage and enslave himself for months on a tiresome honeymoon. He was free.

He walked into the smoking room and received the congratulations of men friends.

"Great night for you, Fraser," cried one. "You must have been saving up luck all these months you've been away."

"You're a fool to quit," said another. "When the luck's running with you, you're always a fool to quit. Why don't you bank a game yourself and make a clean-up?"

"No, I think I'll just stand on what I've got—it's plenty," laughed Fraser.

But the excited talk and laughter from the gaming room came luringly to his ears. After all, perhaps the fellow was right. Certainly, it would not harm him to risk five thousand again. He decided to go back.

CHAPTER IV.

And again he won.

As banker, the chips piled up in front of him. But as banker he was taking a mighty risk. He was staking his luck against many. And he played too long. He played just over that fatal edge that every gambler knows and fears, but never can foresee.

The crash came in two terrific rounds of betting, when players of the "house" united the game with unlimited funds to "break" the man who seemed to have invulnerable luck.

Fraser staggered from the table without even the hundred dollars that he had brought into the game.

A low tinkle of women's laughter followed him as he left the place.

There was only one hope left to Fraser of obtaining money. Anton Sager would let him have it, at his usual frightful rates, he was sure.

He walked to Sager's and signed a note for $6,000 payable in three months. For the note he received only $3,000 in cash. And even as he dealt out that the wiry hands of Anton Sager hesitated.

From the dingy little office of the loan broker, Frank Fraser rode jauntily, remorselessly, to view again the girl whose gentleness and love should have been his salvation, his haven and his hope.

That was the man he was. Perhaps it was the gaming instinct in him that made him able to play so coldly and cruelly the cards of life.

The tangled webs of Fate were swiftly, invisibly enmeshing him. And yet he, who trusted no man, trusted in Fate.

WANT CHARLES ST. PAVED FOR CLEAN-UP WEEK

Residents of historic Charles street ask relief from their "mud-slinging pavement."

The paving of Charles street is full of depressions, irregularities and holes, known as "Thank-you-ma'ams."

Water and mud collect in these holes. The fast-traveling auto and the heavy auto-truck do the rest.

According to the complainants, the street is full of holes and the holes are so full of mud or water that the passage of an auto can be told by the dirty spray that flies clear over to the sidewalks and houses when the wheels strike these pools of water.

Householders and storekeepers assert that mud is spattered up to their windows; that a pedestrian's clothing is not safe—unless he or she can dodge into a side street when an auto comes.

There is a movement on foot to call a mass meeting of Charles streeters at which a new pavement will be demanded.

They say that the coming "Clean Up and Paint Up" week in Boston could well include a repaving of their thoroughfare, because it would save them incessant scrubbings of housefronts and windows.

BANKS PASS UP CITY DEPOSITS AT 3 PER CENT.

Mayor Curley wants banks to pay 3 per cent. on city deposits, notwithstanding the ease in money at present and prospects that rates will go still lower.

On State street the attitude of the Mayor is believed to indicate he has but little idea of the financial situation, and one estimate is that if the city deposited $100,000 in a bank and received 3 per cent. the bank would lose $1,000 a year. The latter would have to keep $25,000 of the amount in reserve and would have to get 4 per cent. from borrowers on the $75,000 remaining to cover the charge.

The call rate in Boston is only 3 per cent. Any money loaned by the bank upon terms which would secure its immediate return would entail loss upon the institution.

The bank, it is figured, would have to get above 6½ per cent. upon time loans to pay the city 3 per cent. and there would be little chance of its making any profit.

Among leading Boston banks which do not want city deposits upon such terms are the Shawmut National, the First National, the Merchants National and the Second National banks, and the New England Trust Company. It will not help Mr. Curley's "Boston Boston" campaign to give the city the reputation of being a place where business men have to pay high interest upon borrowed money.

Hold 4 Natick Boys on Theft of Pies

Four boys pleaded guilty in the Natick court to stiling custard pies that were stolen from a baker's wagon and their cases were continued to April 7. Simeon L. Duffett, seventeen, pleaded guilty to larceny of the pies, while his brother, Warren A. Duffett, fifteen; John R. Mitchell, sixteen, and Robert Dexter, sixteen, pleaded guilty to being delinquent children.

YOU CAN'T BRUSH OR WASH OUT DANDRUFF

The Simplest and Quickest Way Is to Dissolve It.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will entirely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing else destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle, lifeless and scraggy and you notice it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

AMERICAN'S FIGHT FOR REGIONAL BANK IN BOSTON SUCCESSFUL

Boston is to have a regional bank. The campaign begun by the Boston AMERICAN immediately after the new currency act was passed culminated with the announcement by the Reserve Bank Organization Committee that Boston would be one of the chosen cities.

The AMERICAN began its fight for a regional bank in Boston when even Boston bankers were unable to see the desirability of the move. Some Boston bankers at first felt that Boston might as well be a financial annex of New York. The AMERICAN declared that with our railroads and many of our industries New York owned today, a greater measure of independence, instead of dependence, was needed.

The Chamber of Commerce and business associations supported the fight, and, by the time the Organization Committee came to Boston, Boston was a unit in demanding a regional bank, and in demonstrating why this city is entitled to one.

FIFTH IN CAPITAL.

The Boston bank will serve all New England. This district is "District No. 1" in the committee's plan. The bank here will have a cash capital of $9,321,740 to begin with. In amount of capital it thus ranks fifth.

New York's bank has a capital of about $25,000,000. Philadelphia is second with just under $13,000,000. Chicago has about $12,000,000; and Cleveland has about $11,500,000; and Boston ranks next.

The relative strength of the Boston bank is better indicated by the number of banks in the district Boston will serve. The number of banks in the five leading districts is as follows:

Boston	446
New York	478
Philadelphia	800
Cleveland	724
Chicago	884

Thus Boston has fewer banks than any other of the five leading cities. Cleveland, which with a smaller population than Boston, ranks ahead of Boston, is given a tremendous district to serve, and has 724 national banks, against Boston's 446. Nevertheless Boston's capital is only a little below Cleveland's.

Here are the twelve cities selected, with their capital.

Boston	$ 9,321,740
New York	20,887,616
Philadelphia	12,980,615
Cleveland, Ohio	11,528,835
Richmond, Va.	8,263,885
Atlanta, Ga.	4,841,415
Chicago	12,864,100
St. Louis	4,845,879
Minneapolis, Minn.	4,762,864
Kansas City	5,583,955
Dallas, Tex.	5,520,187
San Francisco, Cal.	7,825,405

The surprise in the list is Richmond, Va. It is the home of John Skelton Williams, of the Organization Committee. Its natural banking business is less than half that of New Orleans, which hoped to be designated. But to give Richmond (Va.) reserve bank enough capital a great area has been added to the Richmond district, including Washington, D. C., Maryland and North and South Carolina. The districts allotted are as follows:

TWELVE DISTRICTS.

Boston will represent the New England States: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. There are 446 national banks in this district.

New York will represent only the State of New York, with 478 national banks.

Philadelphia will include all of New Jersey and Delaware, and the eastern part of Pennsylvania, with 800 national banks.

Cleveland will represent all of Ohio, parts of western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and the eastern part of Kentucky, with 724 national banks.

Richmond, Va., will include the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina and all of West Virginia except the counties of Marshall, Ohio, Brooke and Hancock, with 475 national banks.

Atlanta, Ga., will represent Alabama, Georgia, Florida, southern Mississippi, part of southern Tennessee and southwestern Louisiana, with 573 national banks.

Chicago will represent the State of Iowa, southern Wisconsin, the southern peninsula of Michigan, northern Illinois and northern Indiana, with 984 banks.

St. Louis includes Arkansas, eastern Missouri, southern Illinois, southern Indiana, Kentucky, western Tennessee and northern Mississippi, with 434 national banks.

Minneapolis includes the States of Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, northern Wisconsin, northern Michigan, with 687 national banks.

Kansas City includes Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, western Missouri, northern Oklahoma, northern New Mexico, with Kansas City, Mo., with 676 national banks.

Dallas, Texas, includes Texas, southern New Mexico, southern Oklahoma, western Louisiana and northern Arizona, with 726 national banks.

San Francisco includes California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Nevada and Utah, and southern Arizona, with 514 national banks.

Within thirty days each bank must under the law begin the payment for its stock in the reserve banks in its district. Each bank must subscribe 6 per cent. of its combined capital and surplus.

President Wilson is expected to announce the five members of the Federal Reserve Board by May 1. This board will have supervision over the entire new banking system.

BOSTON MEN ELATED.

Boston bankers and business men were elated that a bank was placed here. They see in it a boom for the city's industrial growth.

Joseph H. O'Neil, president of the Federal Trust Company, said: "A regional bank for Boston will certainly help business in this city and in all New England. I see in the establishment of a regional bank here the promise of a revival of the good old Yankee spirit that governed us when Boston led the country. I believe that with the aid of this new banking system Boston will lead the country again."

Professor Oliver M. W. Sprague of Harvard, declared:

"From a sentimental viewpoint it means a great deal. Boston is one of the greatest cities of the country and if we were to be overlooked and made a branch of the New York Federal reserve bank, it would seem strange, to say the least. The rediscount rate of the Boston bank will therefore be in all probability somewhat lower on the average than those of most, if not all, of the other reserve banks."

Mayor Curley said: "Expansion and increase of business are bound to follow having a reserve bank in Boston. By depending on our own resources we shall progress much more rapidly."

'NEWSIES,' 500 OF 'EM TO STORM THEATRE FOR MUTT AND JEFF

Flora B. Russell, favorite in Mutt and Jeff cast at the Globe, who will aid in entertaining the Boston AMERICAN Newsboys.

Mutt slipped the word to Jeff today that there'd be things doing next week.

"What's up?" asked Jeff.

"They're coming," said Mutt.

"Who's coming?"

"Why, you little Mutt of a Jeff you, who but the Boston newies—and Happy?"

It's true—next Monday and Tuesday nights 500 newsboys will see Mutt and Jeff. They will go to the Globe Theatre as the guests of the AMERICAN to see the big show, "Mutt and Jeff in Panama." It's going to be a big night—two big nights in fact.

The AMERICAN has arranged with the management of the big show to have 250 newsboys see the show Monday night and a similar number Tuesday night. "Happy" is to have charge of the two armies of newsboy joys.

The big cast will look after the show end, and it is some show too, believe Mutt and Jeff. Among the entertainers of the newsboys will be Miss Flora B. Russell, who is in the cast. She is a daughter of John Russell of the histrionically famous Russell Brothers.

Barrett for a New Monroe Doctrine

PHILADELPHIA, April 3. — The evolution of the Monroe Doctrine into a Pan-American policy approved by all the American republics was the plan advocated today by John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, before the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Mr. Barrett said that the idea which generally prevails that the United States is sort of a paternal guardian over the small Latin American republics is wrong in principle.

New York to Keep Shakespeare Day

NEW YORK, April 3.—Three men who served on a committee which arranged the celebration held in this city in 1864 in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of William Shakespeare's birth, have been appointed by Mayor John Purroy Mitchel today to serve on a similar committee to take charge of municipal exercises on April 23, the 350th anniversary.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT TODAY IN THE MARKET

Eggs and butter remain low in the Boston markets, giving encouragement to the purchasers of Sunday dinners. Eggs are twenty-seven, twenty-eight and thirty cents and butter thirty, thirty-two, thirty-four and thirty-six, the latter figure for print butter.

Dandelions are fifty cents a peck and spinach forty-five cents. Lettuce is ten cents a bunch. French endive thirty, California celery fifteen and eighteen, cucumbers ten, peppers thirty cents a pound and tomatoes twenty-five. Asparagus is thirty-three cents a bunch.

Fish is selling as follows: Cod and haddock seven cents, finnan haddie eight, steak cod thirteen, lemon sole, sheepsheads and chicken halibut twenty cents, butterfish and salmon fifteen, shad and red snapper twenty, roe shad and sea trout twenty-five, striped bass and bluefish thirty, lobster and Spanish mackerel thirty-five and scallops fifty-five.

Strawberries are thirty, thirty-five, and forty cents a large basket. Oranges from twenty cents for blood oranges to thirty-five and sixty for Florida, with navels at twenty-five and thirty-nine.

$1,500,000 Market Planned by Grocers

At a meeting of the Boston Wholesale Grocers' Association plans were considered for the erecting of a $1,500,000 co-operative building to cover 70,000 square feet of land, and to be nine stories in height.

William B. Mowell, architect, explained the plans and John J. Martin and John N. Cole congratulated the association on "this proposed forward step which would place Boston in the front rank of the other progressive centres of the country."

A Home-Made Hair Grower That Does Marvels

During the last few years announcements have appeared occasionally telling how to make a really good hair tonic that would actually make the hair grow, and it gives us great pleasure to learn that so many who have tried it have obtained such remarkable results. One lady writes that immediately after reading the formula, she went to her druggist and had it put up as directed 2 ounces of Lavoa de Com. cocoae, ½ dram Menthol Crystals, and 6 ounces of Bay Rum. She took this home and, although her hair had been falling out terribly and she was threatened with baldness, she was astonished and delighted to note that not only did the hair stopped immediately, and the hair itself began to grow in an amazing manner. In fact, she says that it has already grown nearly 3 inches in a little over two months. Moreover, her hair is now lighter, glossier and more luxuriant than ever and is still growing. She rubbed the tonic into the roots twice a day for the first three weeks, but now applies it all over once a day. It is extremely interesting to note from this and other reports that this home-made hair grower not only makes the hair grow most marvelously, but it also destroys the dandruff germ and keeps the hair roots and scalp in a perfectly healthy and normal condition. —ADVERTISEMENT.

EDITH WILSON CALLED YOUNG ASTOR 'VINCIE'

Mrs. Edith Wilson, reputed to be worth $2,000,000, who talked familiarly of "Vincie" Astor and "Charley" Schwab, and who is now being sought earnestly by New York creditors, was also a figure in the smart circles of Providence and Narragansett Pier, according to despatches from New York today

Wh n $2,000,000 worth of "securities," which Mrs. Wilson had in a strong box of the United States Deposit Company in New York, proved to consist of railroad timetables and newspaper clippings, angry investigation into her career began.

Mrs. Josephine Lawrence of the Hotel Plaza, New York, great grandmother of the $5,000,000 baby, Josephi. e Lawrence Hopkins, was reported to be social sponsor for Mrs. Wilson.

MRS. LAWRENCE'S DENIAL.

Today Mrs. Lawrence not only denied this, but declared that Mrs. Wilson owes her money, saying:

"There is no truth in the report that the woman is a protege of mine. She was introduced to me at Narragansett Pier, R. I., by Mrs. Albert Horton, a prominent society woman of Providence, R. I. I became interested in Mrs. Wilson, and, of course, had no reason to believe that she was not telling me the truth.

"I remember that she visited me here in my suite at the Plaza on March 6, last, and told me of her litigation with the Washington firm of Jewelers she asserted that her securities had been attached by the jewelers, and that she was in need of money to meet her current expenses. After consulting with my counsel, I advanced her the money"

MRS. WILSON VANISHES.

Mrs Wilson lived in an expensive Madison avenue boarding house. She pa tronized the Rip Van Winkle tea room on West Thirty-seventh street. She id many friends that she often visite this tea room with Vincent Astor or Charles M. Schwab.

Mrs. Wilson has vanished from her boarding house. Attachments have been placed on some of her jewelry, found in a pawn shop, also against additional securities put in the safe of the Hotel Biltmore.

The absent woman is said to have been brought up by a rich Quakeress of Haddonfield, N. J. Her first marriage, to a man named Snyder, was annulled. She married Henry Wilson, seventy-five years old, who died three years ago. Mrs. Wilson accepted a settlement from his family, went West, then appeared in New York two years ago.

MRS. EDITH WILSON, who has vanished from her home in New York after living the life of a millionaire among society people of that city, Newport and Narragansett Pier for two years, and whose creditors are in desperate pursuit of her fleeting millions.

Woman Bequeathes $4,000 to Her Maid

Among the special bequests in the will of Amelia Mackay Goodwin of Cambridge, filed in the Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge today, is one of $4,000 to Veronica Fillis, the testator's maid. Charitable bequests include $1,000 each to the Avon House of Cambridge, Cambridge Hospital, Cambridge Homes for Aged People and the Tuskegee Institute, and $2,000 to the Congregational Ministerial Fund of Concord.

Saw Victoria's Coronation.

William Edward Edmunds, a witness of the events in connection with the coronation of Queen Victoria, is dead at his home, No. 127 Chatham street, Lynn. He was ninety-three.

GIRL ACCEPTED YOUNG MAN IN STREET CAR

It became known today that the couple who figured in the street car proposal, while the girl was on her way to board the Cretic for a European vacation, were Kenneth Ramsay, a Bowdoin College student, and Miss Helen York, an Augusta, Maine society Girl. It was also made known

His proposal was eagerly that he made himself heard beyond the gentle ears for which his words were intended.

Miss York and Kenneth Ramsay were weeping quietly at the prospects of the coming separation, caused by a trip to Europe for the girl. Through the lump in his throat the young man managed to gasp out

"Let's get married!"

"All right," sobbed the girl; "wait till I get back."

When Kenneth bade his fiancee good-by, just before the gangplank was to be withdrawn, he broke down and wept. Miss York wept too.

On the dock a reporter questioned C. S. York the father of the young woman. He said when asked if he was sure that his daughter had become engaged to Ramsay:

"Well, I have not been notified of it officially, but I had expected as much."

Miss York, when seen at the last minute on the liner, could not help acknowledging the engagement and young Ramsay did not deny it.

BULGAR QUEEN DEFIES THREAT TO COME HERE

LONDON, April 3.—Ever since Queen Eleonore of Bulgaria announced she would visit the United States she has received many letters from America threatening that if she carries out her purpose she will never leave American shore.

Such is the startling information given to the AMERICAN correspondent by the Queen's special envoy, who sails for New York today to complete plans for the visit.

Most of these letters are anonymous, said the Queen's envoy, who is an American. "They come from all over the United States, but the handwriting proves they were written by the foreign-born there and most of them by men of a certain nationality.

"But the Queen is absolutely fearless. The threats cannot affect her plans or lots. When I was leaving Sofia her majesty said to me:

"I have no dread. I know the Americans will protect me. Besides, one can die but once. If it should be my lot to be assassinated in America it would at least prove of the interests of my beloved country."

Queen Eleonore will sail from Hamburg on May 21 or May 27. She will remain in the United States about four weeks, traveling from coast to coast.

There will be about twenty persons in her suite, including ladies and gentlemen-in-waiting, an aide de camp, her secretaries and servants.

King Ferdinand's personal physician will accompany her besides several Bulgarian doctors and four young Bulgarian girls who have been selected at Robert College, the American school in Constantinople. The young women will be left in America for a course in hospital training. In exchange the Queen hopes to take back four American nurses.

Standard Brands OF Men's Clothing For $1.00 a Week

N. SALLINGER

Originator of the famous Order Check which enables men and women to obtain Credit at their favorite stores for the Cash Bargain Prices, and PAY $1.00 A WEEK.

I AM the first and only man in New England selling STANDARD BRANDS of men's clothing on credit. I sell more STANDARD BRANDS than any other retail establishment in Boston, cash or credit, simply because I make this my specialty.

I have revolutionized the men's department of the credit business by giving the public the opportunity of buying on credit at cash prices the leading brands of national reputation—clothes made by the most reputable concerns in America who have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars advertising their product in the leading magazines and who stand behind every garment.

For the eighth consecutive season I have renewed my exclusive agreement with the manufacturers of STANDARD BRANDS not to charge one cent more for any suit or overcoat than is charged by the cash stores. This agreement is complete and absolute and you are fully protected in every way. Remember, the labels of these well known, STANDARD BRANDS appear on every garment put out by me, and you will find each brand to be a leader in its respective class. It is no longer necessary to pay exorbitant prices for inferior grades of clothing. Before purchasing on credit do yourself the justice of investigating my men's clothing proposition which you will find is the best ever offered to the public.

MRS. CHILD MARSHALS WORKING WOMEN FOR BIG SUFFRAGE PARADE

Mrs. Richard Washburn Child, one of the organizers of the suffrage parade, May 2, photographed at her desk

One of the best features of the woman suffrage parade in Boston on May 2, when 10,000 are expected to be in line, will be the division of working women, which is being organized by Mrs. Richard Washburn Child.

As chairman of the "Industrial Section," Mrs. Child is in charge of the representatives of such lines of work as stenography, nursing, newsgirls and so on.

Following the big suffrage mass meeting in Tremont Temple the parade committee took up the work in hand with renewed vigor. The attendance encouraged them greatly. With the parade only a month away the committee members feel that they have none too much time to arrange an impressive display.

The parade will draw suffragists from all over the State. There will be some floats and other special features. One of the novelties now being planned is a troop of horsewomen, modeled along the line of the "Black Horse Troop," of Virginia suffragists. A marching chorus of singing suffragists will be an attractive item in the parade line.

In the parade there will be actors, artists, clergymen, dentists, lawyers, musicians, nurses, physicians, social workers, teachers, business women, writers, mounted police, boy scouts, bands, decorated floats, housewives, farmers, a mens section, junior section and others.

CLEAN-UP AND PAINT-UP MEN OUTLINE WORK

Members of the New England Clean-up and Paint-up Committee met at the Boston City Club with F. E. Stacy acting Mayor of Springfield, and B. Fletcher Barber as guests. Acting Mayor Stacy spoke at length concerning progress of the campaign in Springfield and a letter from Mayor Curley expressing regret on his inability to attend and indorsing the movement was read.

A plan was decided on for a general "get together" meeting on the evening of April 21 at Ford Hall. The committee in charge of this meeting consists of E. F. du Grouchy, Chairman, George A. Flet of Waltham and Howard Whitmore.

Marked progress in the Clean-up and Paint-up campaign was reported. George C. Morton reported on the sending out of four pages of plate matter to newspapers throughout New England, slides for the motion picture theatres showing "before and after" views and prizes for children in the various towns who will put in four hours time cleaning up. The movement has passed the experimental stage, successful campaigns having been waged in St. Louis, Denver, Lit[illegible]more, Buffalo and 50 cities and towns in the Middle West.

Louis K. Rourse, Commissioner of Public Works, has ready for distribution a circular addressed to every resident of Greater Boston outlining [illegible] which have been completed for [illegible] of garbage and debris.

The program for Clean-up and Paint-up week is

May 3, Sunday. Church Day, start the week right.

May 4, Monday. Fire Prevention Day. Clean up indoors. Start in attic and finish in cellar. Put all rubbish into barrels ready to be carried away.

May 5, Tuesday. Back Yard Day. Gather up all rubbish, old papers, empty cans, or ashes in your back yard and put into barrels. Whitewash cellar, straighten up fences, repair walks, sow grass seed.

May 6, Wednesday. Front Yard Day. Put the front yard in order. Trim up lawn, remove weeds, plant flower garden.

May 7, Thursday. Paint Day. Look your property over and see what painting is necessary to make things spick and span. Porch chairs and small jobs.

May 8, Friday. Dig and Dandelion Day. Screen garbage cans and fill on standard water and get rid of flies and mosquitoes. Remove dandelions from lawn.

May 9, Saturday. Children's Day. Ask the children to pick up papers in vacant land and around parks and playgrounds. Reward the children that have helped with prizes and by giving them a party in the afternoon, serving lemonade and cookies.

NEED ABOUT $50 MORE FOR LEPER WIRELESS FUND

Archie Thomas' Wireless Fund—the fund that will give a sending apparatus to the boy-leper on Penikese—is close to the $150 mark. The boy has a receiving apparatus, but has never been able to afford a sending device.

Two hundred dollars, it is estimated, will buy the apparatus. Any sum over that amount will be used for the [illegible] of installation and for repairs to the receiving apparatus.

The total for today was $17, which brought the final figures to date to $141.75. The contributions received were as follows:

VANITIE LARGEST OF ALL YACHT RACERS FOR AMERICA CUP

The steamer City of Stamford has been chartered for Alexander S Cochran to act as a tender for his cup defender, Vanitie. The boat has been used to run between New York and Stamford

This vessel will be used for the crew's living quarters and to carry sails, spare spars and extra rigging. Mr. Cochran's yacht will be the steamer Mohican, which he purchased last Fall, and he and his guests will live on that vessel

All three of the cup defenders now have their auxiliaries That for the Resolute, building for the New York Yacht Club syndicate, is the steamer Cape Cod, which formerly ran between Providence and Fall River. She is a big, able craft and will have rooms for Robert W Emmons, 2d, and his guests

The Defiance will use the schooner Ireitta as a tender and that yacht will be towed about by the motor yacht Zpalong. Both of these vessels are owned by Walter Clark, one of the leading spirits in the syndicate. G. M. Pynchon's motor yacht Maria will be used for the visitors who are to sail on the Defiance and also will be used as a dispatch boat

TRAINER FOR THE CREW.

Mr. Cochran has made a novel departure in the way the crew of his yacht, Vanitie, is to be handled. Captain William Dennis is to be the sailing master. Captain Harry Hall will be his chief assistant, and the crew will be handled by Edward Rausher, who formerly was a trainer on the staff of the New York Athletic Club.

Mr. Cochran thinks that much depends on the physical condition of the members of the crew and so has engaged Rausher to look after the men. At the New York Athletic Club his work was to care for those members who desired his services and he used to act as a trainer, giving exercises an massage treatment to many of the members of the club

He has selected the crew, choosing men who in his opinion were physically able to do the hard work of handling sails on a big yacht. He will look after the men, keeping them physically fit, and really act as a trainer. This is something new in yachting.

The Vanitie, it is expected, will be launched between the 20th and 25th of this month. It is hoped that the yacht will be ready by the 20th, but there has been a slight delay owing to an error made in the plates being used.

These plates were not just what were ordered and had to be rejected and there was a delay waiting for the new material. Now, unless there are other unforeseen delays the yacht will be ready for her first plunges into the ocean not later than April 25.

VANITIE IS THE LARGEST.

Although no details of the three cup defenders are being made public by those interested, enough has leaked out to show what has been done so far. It is generally conceded that the Vanitie, designed by William Gardner, is the largest of the American trio and she will allow time to the others, just how much will depend on the amount of displacement the yacht has. The Herreshoff yacht Resolute is placed next in size and the Owen designed Defiance is the smallest.

All three are centreboarders, but they are different again in this respect The Resolute has a very small board It does not come above the top of the lead and when dropped will add only about four and a half feet to the draught This will make her extreme draught with board down about 18 23 ft.

The Vanitie has a big board. It comes up to the cabin floor and when dropped will increase the draught to 21 or 22 feet. The board of the Defiance is between these two, so that probably the draught of the Defiance will be a little more than that of the Resolute.

As the board of the Resolute does not come above the top of the lead keel, that yacht has no centreboard trunk, but with the two other vessels it has been necessary to build trunks in which the boards will be hoisted or lowered as necessity requires.

SHAMROCK STILL LARGER.

Yacht designers are of opinion that the Shamrock IV. will be larger than the Vanitie and will have to allow time to the defender of the cup. She too must have a big board, because in talking of this board Designer Nicholson said that the truck was above the cabin floor and it would not be surprising if it drops at least ten feet below the lead, making the draught of that yacht with board down between twenty-three and twenty-four feet.

The centreboard, according to American rules, is not taxed at all. It is not measured and in plain language is a cheater. A designer is able to use a sliding centreboard to give his yacht stability and ability to point high in windward work, but the measurer takes into consideration only the depth of the fixed keel in making the dimensions of racing craft

According to cable reports there has been a delay in obtaining some metal used in the construction of the Shamrock This is an aluminium alloy used largely for deck plating. This delay has interfered seriously with the finishing of the yacht and she will not be launched until early next month This will cause her trials in home waters to be shortened and put the challenger at a serious disadvantage with the defenders in getting into racing trim

UNITE TO RID CAMBRIDGE OF BOXING BOUTS

The reform element in Cambridge has clinched with the boxing ma ter for a decision

The sensation over the Company E bouts in the Cambridge armory—now announced as postponed to Monday—has only forced matters.

Today Rev. William S. Macnair, pastor of the Prospect Street Congregational Church and president of the Cambridge Law Enforcement Association, said:

"We are going to force the prize-fighting game out of Cambridge because the better element of the city is against it. As president of the Law Enforcement Association I have taken the initiative and have the support of all the clergy in the city We intend to ask the co-operation of the Harvard College authorities. We have registered a strong protest with Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J Cunningham

"We are not going after any one body We wish to clean the game out entirely The citizens are indignant and it is my belief that some people in Cambridge have allowed the sporting element to fool them"

Pastor Macnair has written to Adjutant-General Pearson, protesting against the proposed armory bouts

These bouts, under management of the Company E Athletic Association, were to have been held last night, but Colonel Graves of the Eighth Regiment, whose headquarters are at the armory, revoked the permit

Captain William J Greene of Company E says the bouts will not be held in the Cambridge armory now, even if Colonel Graves should consent The main event was to be a ten-round go between Jack (Twin) Sullivan and "Porky" Flynn

Cambridge pastors are planning a general attack on the boxing game from their Sunday pulpits

Morrison I. Swift, leader of the unemployed, had cards printed today containing, among other items, the following caustic paragraph

The unemployed demand that, after the wealth and culture of Cambridge and Boston have gluted their belligerent instincts, they (the unemployed) be permitted to sleep on the floors of these military prize rings.

CALLS WILSON TOLLS REPEAL 'TRAITOROUS'

Scoring the policies of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan as "the new treason," Bainbridge Colby, former Judge of the New York superior Court, told listeners at a Dorchester rally for James H Connolly, Progressive candidate for Congress in the Tenth District that Root of New York, aided by Murray Crane of Massachusetts, is leading the Old Guard of Republicanism in an attempt to "support a Democratic President in a traitorous try to admit England into joint regulation with us of the Panama Canal." He added

"First Wilson says the exemption of our coastwise traffic from toll payment is in plain contravention of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Then he begs the question, and says that whether we are right or wrong, we ought to reverse our action without raising the question as to whether we are right or wrong"

RIDICULES WILSON.

"Then he says we ought to do it in order that we may deserve our reputation for generosity, implying that for some time we have enjoyed a reputation for generosity which we have not deserved. Then he says our honor demands the course, and he asks us to believe that our honor has been trampled under foot by the preceding Congress, by his two immediate predecessors in the presidential chair, and by the eminent lawyers who have filled the offices of Attorney-General and Secretary of State in the last two national administrations

"Shifting from the appeal to honor, he injects the cajoling tone of a personal request, confiding to us with intimate disclosure that he will not know, quite what to do in certain unspecified matters of delicacy and near consequence, unless we ungrudgingly comply with his request.

"And finally he grounds his appeal upon the exigencies of his divided party, saying in effect, 'Let us have party harmony even at the expense of our national dignity and sovereignty'

"APPLIES GAG RULE."

"Not content with this mass of inconsistency, the administration invokes the numerical strength of a servile pie-counter majority to apply the gag rule of cloture to a discussion that is not begun."

He scored Ambassador Page and Secretary Bryan on their "humiliating freedom of speech," and predicted

"We may soon be writing opposite the new freedom the new treason—treason to party, treason to platform, treason to self. God grant that when this sorry chapter is ended we may not have to add—treason to country"

AVOID FORCE IN SENATE ON TOLL REPEAL

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Leaders on the Senate fight for the repeal of the Panama canal tolls exemption clause will not attempt to force a vote on the question until there is evidence of an organized filibuster against the measure. It is proposed by the administration forces to prevent as much as possible any antagonism of the opponents because of the close alignment of strength

Democratic Senators opposed to the repeal charged today that instructions were sent from Democratic national headquarters in New York during the last campaign to speakers in Pacific Coast states and other far western States to "play up" the free tolls pledge of the Baltimore platform

This argument will be used during debate to meet the statement of administration leaders that the free tolls plank was not an issue during the campaign; that it was placed surreptitiously in the Baltimore platform and had no influence upon the result of the election

Both sides continue their confident predictions as to the final vote, but it is conceded generally that the situation at present is most uncertain.

The present administration majority is estimated from two to twelve votes Declaration by Senators Burleigh of Maine and Oliver of Pennsylvania and other Republicans that they would vote against repeal have encouraged the anti-administration forces

Central Asks to Run Rutland Boats

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Application was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad for permission to operate the Rutland Transit Company, a subsidiary concern, after the Panama Canal act becomes effective next July. The transit company operates eight steamer on the Great Lakes and is capitalized at $1,000,000.

LONDON, April 3.—The other day a woman appeared in a London street in a trouser skirt which every male observer voted extremely ugly and immodest

The freak garment soon attracted a crowd, and the woman, to avoid its attentions, entered a store and escaped by way of the roof

To manager of the wholesale clothing firm which invented this bifurcated skirt now announces that he has received orders for 250 of them. A modification of the garment, available for women not possessing sufficient courage to wear the original in public consists of a loose skirt worn over trousers.

POLITICS IN HIS REMOVAL, SAYS REVERE CHIEF

Clair F. Chainey, former acting police chief of Revere, told Judge Hosson in Chelsea District Court today that politics had played a big part in the action of the Revere Selectmen when they recently removed him Chainey asked the court to compel the Selectmen to reinstate him.

Chainey was ousted after a long and bitter hearing, lasting late into the night. He was accused of pleasure riding in the police auto when off duty and of neglecting to "clean up" liquor and gambling elements in the town. A raid by the Metropolitan Park police on the Lynnway Club was used as one argument against him.

Chainey denied the charges. Asserting that he had done everything to maintain law and order in the shore town

Judge Bosson ruled today that, in order to show that the Selectmen acted in bad faith, Chainey could not ... source any other witnesses than those who testified at the hearing

The judge ruled, however, that Chainey could put new witnesses in support of a plea that he had been dismissed without due cause. The case was continued until Tuesday, April 7.

MACON, Ga., April 3.—The Braves pulled up stakes today and broke camp and started North, by way of Atlanta, where they play two games this afternoon and tomorrow.

There were few of the players and camp followers who begrudged the onward movement. We have been here just a month, and in that time the Boston National League team, under the careful eye of Manager Stallings has succeeded in getting itself in fine physical condition.

It was a well-balanced game, fighting team that left Macon today, full of enthusiasm.

The last night in Macon will be long remembered by the players. The Chamber of Commerce gave the Boston delegation a banquet in the rathskeller of the Hotel Dempsey.

The hour for the start of the banquet was fixed for 8:30 p. m.

The hour for the start of the regular dinner at the Hotel Dempsey is 6 p. m.

The players one and all formed what in the old football days would have been called a V-shaped wedge as soon as the dining-room of the hotel was opened at 6 o'clock.

WILD RUSH FOR DINING-ROOM.

They piled into the dining-room and hit the bill of fare from soup to nuts. Then they loafed around the lobby for two hours, after which the banquet hour being at hand, they descended to the rathskeller and got outside of a very elaborate menu without turning a hair.

A good, healthy ball team can do more eating in a given period than any other set of men on earth. Later in the evening ... somewhat hungry ... all right ... their fill ... coffee.

In spite of the surprising amount of food they consumed ... few hours, every man ... was on hand at breakfast ... The surprising part of the whole performance is that they all declared they never felt better in their lives than they did when they boarded the train for Atlanta.

The final game between the Braves and the Macons resulted in the easiest kind of victory for the Bostons. The score was something like 14 to 0.

The size of the score makes no difference, but the fact that Big Bill James' spitter was working well means a lot to the Boston team.

JAMES PUT UP GREAT GAME.

Bill worked better than he has since he joined the team, more than a year ago. He has plenty of natural ability, but he has been abusing it by pitching too much in practice, and taking advice from every Tom, Dick and Harry on the team.

Finally, Fred Mitchell told him not to throw a ball unless it was to him (Mitchell). The result has been that James warms up for only ten minutes a day, and so when he goes in to pitch he has something.

His spitball was certainly a corker in the final game against Macon. The Sally Leaguers simply couldn't touch it. James struck out eight men in the four innings he worked, and had the opposing batsmen tumbling all over themselves in their efforts to hit it.

If James ... attention to what ... he will prove ... to the Braves this season. He ... stuff, but heretofore has ... it in practice, so that when ... came to pitch a game he was ...

CUBANS LEFT WITH MACONS.

Two of the three Cubans will probably stay here in Macon. The Macon club wanted all three of them, but it was finally arranged that Pitcher Villizon and third baseman Gonzales will join the Macon team, while Pitcher Luquy continued on with the Braves.

The two that are left behind are hardly of big league calibre just now, although Gonzales is quite a good ball player.

The two will be of great value as drawing cards to the Macon team. Jacksonville is in the same league, and Jacksonville is full of Cubans who turn out to the games whenever ... So that Macon is likely to have record crowds in Jacksonville this season.

Stallings had further business to attend to at his plantation, so he returned there early today. He will not go with the team until it reaches Charlotte, N. C., next Monday.

TY COBB TELLS MORE BASEBALL TRAGEDIES

Written Expressly for the Boston American.

By TY COBB.

We had a young pitcher come South to join the Detroit club three seasons ago who looked like another Walter Johnson. He had worlds of speed and a fine break on his curve ball.

Jennings, as usual, warned all his pitchers against going at it hard until they had worked out well, but on the third day after the regulars reached camp this youngster was sent to the box to pitch to the batters for hitting practice.

None of the boys was batting much, and when it came my turn I was surprised to see one come up with a big hook on it that missed my bat a foot or so.

Of course, I could not do anything with all the Winter's dust on my lamps, and so I struck out. The boy grinned all over. He was sure he was making good.

I hunted up Jennings, who was coaching some of the recruits in the art of the fall-away slide.

"Say, 'Hughie,'" said I, "that youngster out there is throwing hooks and putting on steam as if it was the middle of August."

"I didn't think you fellows were hitting them much," said Jennings. "Hey, you!" he yelled at the young pitcher. "Come here."

The recruit shot up one more fast one and then, still grinning, ambled over to the manager.

"What are you trying to do?" bawled Jennings. "Didn't I tell you to take it easy? Go back to the hotel and see if the trainer can keep that wing of yours from dropping off after the way you have used it."

He Went Back to the Minors and Stayed.

The boy, expecting praise instead of blame, hung his head and went. The trainer could not do anything for the arm, and it was so sore during the rest of our stay in the Spring camp that he was not fit to show again.

He went back to the minors after coming up to the training camp with high hopes. He is in the "bushes" yet. And I'll lay ten to one that he still tells back home that they turned him out after he had fanned most of the Detroit sluggers.

"You've got to have a pull to break into the Big League," he doubtless concludes his story. I know, because I have heard many of them talk.

The Giants have had their share of tragedies. McGraw dug up a very promising left-hander in the South ... years ago named "Dave" Robertson. I know he would have made ... the Big League because I am ... with his record.

... one of those men who are ... and who have the ... doing anything in this line ... being a great college pitcher ... was the star football player at the University of Virginia. When McGraw signed this boy he ...

"Now I want you to promise me not to play football next Fall."

Robertson still had another year to finish his college course, and he planned to do this before joining the Giants.

The boy promised, but when the snappy days of the Fall came around ... felt that his college needed his services he forgot his promise to the Giants' manager, and went into the game. He quit it when they broke his collar bone, and this accident stripped his pitching arm of its power.

A Big League Career Ruined.

A brilliant big league career was undoubtedly spoiled for this youngster simply because he entered one game of football. All predicted that he was one of the coming left-handers of the game, and good southpaws are scarce enough.

Now McGraw thinks he has turned him into an outfielder, he put him out with a minor league club last Spring with instructions to the manager to try him in the outer pasture. This manager returned Robertson with glowing accounts of his hitting and fielding ability.

But he will never shine as an outfielder as he would have shone as a star southpaw if he had kept his promise. Therefore, the blighting of his career as a pitcher before he even got into the big league was a tragedy.

There is the story of a busher on the St. Louis Browns who was particularly fresh and who got into a row with "Bill" Bradley, the old third baseman of the Cleveland club, one day because he was a little careless about exposing his spikes as he slid into the base. "Bill" said it was only due to his own shiftiness that he avoided being cut.

"I'll get you for that, young fellow," said "Bill" to the boy.

The first chance Bradley had he cut into the recruit with his spikes.

"How do you like that kind of sliding?" said "Bill."

The boy only laughed.

"You cut my uniform a little," he said. Then he finished the game.

All But Killed This Young Player.

It was noticed that he dropped out of the league after that contest, but none thought of it until late the next season. Many "bushers" come and go.

Then "Bill" got a note on the bench one day asking him to step over to a certain part of the stand. There sat a young fellow with a beard of a week on his face and his clothes in tatters.

"Who are you?" asked Bradley.

"Remember the young fellow with the St. Louis club you said you'd get?" asked the young fellow. "Well, I'm that guy. You got me all right."

"I remember you now, but I didn't even know you were cut," answered "Bill." "You finished the game."

"Certainly I finished the game," said the other. "Did you think I was going to lay down? That was when the bone in my leg was infected. Dirt got into the cut. Haven't been able to use the leg since."

Bradley told the boy to come to the club house after the contest, and "Bill" dug down in the old sock.

"Gee, I'm sorry," remarked Bradley, thoughtfully, as he dressed. "That boy looked like a comer, too."

Yale Captain May Lose Seat in Boat

NEW HAVEN, April 3.—There is much the same atmosphere about Yale crew quarters now as there is at Gales Ferry just before the Harvard race. The two-mile race Wednesday will largely decide which men are to have places in the varsity boat that meets Harvard. There are so many evenly matched oarsmen on the squad that no one is sure of his place.

There is even some doubt as to whether Captain Bayne Denegre will have a seat in the eight when it is finally made up. Nickalls says if he finds a better man for the crew, Denegre will either row in the four-oared or watch the race from the banks.

"Tell by the Taste"

Red Sox Notes

By JACK CONWAY.

COLUMBUS, O., April 3.—Rankin Johnson, the former Syracuse hurler, has been dubbed "Tex" by his esteemed team-mates. It is because he hails from Marbles Falls, Texas.

* * *

JOHNSON'S father is Mayor of Marbles Falls. He is also a thirty-third degree baseball "fan," and naturally takes great interest in the work of his son. "Tex" always sends his father a copy of a paper containing an account of each game in which he engages, and the honorable gentleman pastes the clipping in a large scrap book, which adorns his private office.

* * *

THE new Red Sox mound artist is the master of a puzzling fade-away. Like Christy Mathewson's famous fade-away it leaves the pitching hand like a bullet, but just before it reaches the plate the pellet loses its momentum and drops sharply downward.

* * *

CARRIGAN wants to have his men in the best of condition for the opening of the season as they are rather unfortunate in having their first two series with the Senators and Athletics respectively.

* * *

IF the Red Sox can break even with these two teams, they should be able to keep up among the leaders, as there are not any clubs in Ban Johnson's circuit which have anything on those piloted by Clarke Griffith and Connie Mack.

* * *

DUFFY LEWIS is making life miserable for opposing third basemen. Duffy still hits the ball in the direction of left field, and it would take a stone wall to stop some of the liners which he sends by third base.

* * *

LEWIS and Yerkes hit the ball harder than any men on the team. They both take a long, healthy swing at the pellet, and when the ash crashes with the horsehide the ball usually sails merrily on a line toward the outfield fence.

By JACK CONWAY.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 3—The Red Sox will make their final appearance of the year in three parts this afternoon when they will endeavor to make it three straight victories over the ambitious Nashville club, and unless something terrible happens Carrigan's band should make good their boast not to let the volunteers win a game for, in our humble opinion, this fair town is not represented by one of the three crack minor league teams which ever trotted out on to a diamond.

Carrigan will probably use some of his young hurlers in today's game. Much interest is the only regular with the exception of Joe Wood, who is on the hospital list, who has not offered his services for the inspection of the Nashville fans.

Bedient, however, is suffering from a chill in his pitching arm and will probably not go into the box until the team hits Columbus

Carrigan may use either Matt Zeider or Ed Reilly. Both of these youngsters showed to advantage in the workouts at Hot Springs and should do well under fire.

SPEAKER ON SICK LIST.

Tris Speaker will probably don the spangles again today. "Spoke" did not play yesterday, as he was suffering from a severe cold and did not want to take any unnecessary chances.

The Nashville hurlers wish the "$18,000 beauty" a speedy recovery, but they would like to have him take a rest until the Red Sox board the rattler for Columbus tonight.

Everett Scott will be unable to play today. He was spiked in his left foot yesterday while endeavoring to catch a runner at second and will be obliged to watch the game from the bench for several days. In the meantime "Child" Harold Janvrin, our best little tango dancer, will pastime around the short field.

Steve Yerkes is back in the game again and his foot, which was spiked last week, is as good as ever, as the guardian of the Keystone station proved when he made a clean steal of third base in yesterday's game.

Stephen also banged out a triple in order to convince the skeptics that his ankle forced layoff did not have any injuri ius effect on his batting eye.

LEWIS A SECOND "SPOKE."

If Speaker plays today the poor Nashville pitchers are liable to have nervous prostration. They always considered "Spoke" a demon slugger, but they have been introduced to D. Lewis of California.

They are unable to determine whether Speaker or Lewis is able to hit the hardest. Speaker got a home run and two singles in four times at bat in the first game here, but yesterday Lewis managed out a home run, triple, double and single in five trips to the plate.

He struck out when he went to bat for the fifth time. He was undoubtedly desirous of proving that he is only human.

We almost neglected to state that the score of yesterday's game was 7 to 6 in favor of the Red Sox. It was a weird contest. There was good, bad and mediocre baseball crowded into the nine innings.

EAGAN BOXES WITH GLOVER AT NEW CLUB

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Joe Eagan vs. Johnny Glover; Kid McDonald vs. Terry Smalley; Joe Coen vs. Terry Morley and Tony Lorenzo vs. Teddy Murphy, Neptune A. C.

Jimmy Clabby vs. Billy Murray, San Francisco.

K. O. Brown vs. Packey Homey, New York.

Bob Lefavour vs. Bill McKinnon and Gus Leary vs. Charles Sheppard, Lewiston, Me.

By RINGSIDE.

Tonight at the Neptune A. C. quar-ters on Dartmouth street, the first professional bout staged in Boston since Eddie A. closed will have Joe Eagan and Johnny Gloves, both of South Boston, mixing matters up for ten rounds.

The boxers are old rivals and after a couple of very close battles, each is anxious to get a decision that cannot be gainsaid.

Three six-round prelims, with lots of good local youngsters doing the scrapping, will precede the main battle. Kid McDonald boxes Terry Smalley, Joe Coen faces Henry Morley, and the semi-final will have Tony Lorenzo and Teddy Murphy as participants.

* * *

The membership of the club has in-creased considerably in the last few days, and a good crowd will undoubtedly see the battle. As many local clubs have come to grief on account of lax procedure regarding membership, the Neptune management will be especially watchful at the gate and none but listed members will be admitted.

To accommodate fans wishing to see the bouts, the club office at Room 311, Winthrop Building, will remain open till 4 o'clock today.

* * *

The special match between Howard McKay, the New England 125-pound champion, and Johnny Noonan of Dorchester which will feature the amateur meeting at the Quincy Athletic Association on April 7, should be some fight.

Noonan is one of the best youngsters in the "pure" ranks hereabouts, and will be a dangerous contender in the Nationals. Medley by his battling in the bouts last Saturday showed also that it will take a sterling scrapper to beat him.

ENGLAND PLANS GREAT WELCOME FOR OUIMET

When Francis Ouimet, the golf champion, embarks from the steamer Lapland in England he will receive the greatest reception ever accorded a visiting champion, according to Dan Mackie of the Century club of New York, who has just returned from a two-months' sojourn abroad.

Mackie declared England is wild to see the young Brookline boy in action on the foreign courses and says that British golfers are still talking about Vardon and Ray's defeat last year at the Country Club in the national championship by Ouimet.

The Gotham golfer states that the foreigners don't think it possible for a twenty-year-old boy to beat such veterans as Vardon and Ray. Many regard Ouimet's victory as a fluke.

Mackie, who comes from a celebrated English family of golfers, says that he has been stopped on many occasions and asked just what Ouimet looks like. Now he passed on particularly how he pronounced his name.

Unlike many other English "pros" in this country, Mackie believes Ouimet and Travers stand a very excellent chance of winning the British amateur title at Sandwich in May, provided that gales don't sweep in from the sea.

These have proved very troublesome in the past to visiting golfers unused to the high winds that blow across the historic course when tournaments are being played.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

THE TWO BOSTON CLUBS HAVE MADE good use of their scouts in the Federal League this year, Bob Harmon, Fred Smith, Marty Berry, Dave Bancroft and "Pete" Compton—all three with a two- Earl Moseley and Fred Anderson, the Red Sox.

TREAT A PITCHER FOR HOOKWORM is the advice Pat Dougherty, who joined after the Detroit players during the training season, has given Manager Jenkins. If Jenkins does so treat Prog Tarsi, who, he claims is afflicted with the disease.

FRANK CHANCE, "THE FEARLESS" leader of the Bridgeport team, says that he would not trade Walter Johnson, the great pitcher of the Senators, or Ty Cobb, "THE" baseball player in the limits of a ball team.

BOBBY BURNE HAS ALREADY MADE good as a scout, as with the Phillies, and Manager Dooin says he will make Philadelphia a fine home for Al Kaiser.

SAMMY STRANG McKEIN, AFTER SPENDing several years in Paris collecting his voice has returned to America, now he talks a mile a minute, but to coach the West Point Military Academy baseball team.

CLYDE MILAN'S NEW CONTRACT WITH Washington is for one year only. Talk was at the suggestion of Manager Griffith, who told the outfielder that unless he showed a raise next year at the end would be let loose.

VINCENT CAMPBELL, WHO MADE HIS last appearance as a professional baseball player in Texas and then retired to a ranch, has had so much money to play ball, has planned the formation of a Federal League club for next year. Pat is the conservative baseball player in the country, and the proposal is a big surprise to his associates.

TY TYLER, BAKER DOES NOT BECOME A member of Detroit's coaching staff this season, but he will go to Detroit in a year or two, but he failed to make good. He has never drawn his unconditional release, and is now playing baseball in the Texas League.

ONE OF THE FEATURES LACKING AT the baseball games this year is the absence of the Germans. Last year they were there in force, but this year they have gone to baseball games in the Federal League cities, and it is said that the attendance has been cut down considerably.

Dean Will Swim Against Hebner

Russel Dean, representing the Brookline Gymnasium, will compete at the Illinois A. C. swimming meet one week from tomorrow night in the 150-yard back stroke event with Harry Hebner, the old Notre Dame University athlete.

Scouts Take Cooking Test.

The postponed hike of the Beaver Patrol, Troop One, Boston, will take place Saturday. The scouts plan to go to Middlesex Fells and take their cooking test. Troop One during the past week has enrolled about a dozen new men who, at the next meeting will take the "tenderfoot" examination given by Scout Commissioner Loomis.

Rangers Without Games.

The Rangers of Malden would like to arrange games with any strong amateur teams in and around Boston. Address Harry Cullen, No. 343 Main street, Malden.

Help Wanted

By WEBSTER DENISON

"That is all, little girl. When I talk to you of other things it is only because I am fond of you. I have discovered in you an interesting personality. You are so frank and so appalled by the world. I love to watch you grow to be your natural self. I am grieved that you should accept my interest in you the wrong way."

This assertion of exceeding solicitation on the part of the millionaire was cut short by the entrance of his son. Jack had made the incursion into the private office in the hope of finding Gertrude alone. It was early and he was somewhat surprised to see his stepfather at his desk.

"Good morning, governor. Do you at work early today."

"Oh, not particularly, my boy. What can I do for you?"

The junior partner cast a sidelong glance at Gertrude. A sort of a secret thought wave passed between them. Jack was inspired.

A PROPOSITION

"Well, the little matter I want to speak to you about concerns—Miss—Meyer here. Perhaps I might as well say it in front of her. I was talking to Crane about the stenographers the other day and he mentioned—casually—that your private secretary had a good deal of correspondence. Added, I believe, that while she was progressing finely under your—encouragement and care, the work was a little heavy for her."

"Now, I have a very efficient stenographer assigned to me, governor, and I thought—that—if it was perfectly agreeable to you—inasmuch as the dictation I have is rather light—in comparison to yours"—he flushed a trifle—"that we might make an exchange of private secretaries. In one case you might be the gainer by this transaction, and in another sense—he looked at Gertrude—"I might be."

Scott glanced keenly at the junior partner. His eyes blinked good-naturedly with an owl-like penetration of the boy's motive. He reached over leisurely toward a box of perfectos on the desk, selected one and passed the box to Jack.

"Have one," he said casually.

Jack accepted

"Who is the young lady assigned to you, Jack?"

"Miss Williams."

"Oh."

"A very efficient young woman, I am sure you, governor."

"Yes."

"Yes—very competent."

Scott got up and walked over midway between Jack and Gertrude. He stood looking first at one and the other in a sort of quizzical way, and then his half smile broadened into a grin as his eyes fastened on Gertrude. His bushy little moustache now took on a similitude to Mephisto's. The twinkle in his eye grew almost fiendish as he looked at the girl and asked:

"What do you think of my stepson's proposition, Miss Meyer?"

The girl flushed faltered for an instant, glanced toward the door and then at the ceiling. She turns it then to Scott with a look of resignation.

"Whatever you wish, Mr Scott," she said.

The millionaire turned to his stepson.

"I'm afraid, Jack, that Miss Meyer is not sufficiently enthusiastic about the change. I appreciate your consideration of me, but I have every reason to believe that my present secretary will fill the bill here. Of course, she was new, but I feel competent to assist her and instruct her in her duties. Perhaps in the outer office to did do. Don't believe I recall just w. o Miss Williams is, but I guess, my b'y, you had better worry along with her."

"All right, governor, just as you wish."

A WARNING

Ie boy withdrew as gracefully as he could and Scott returned to his desk. He was silent for a moment. He sat looking toward the window, apparently oblivious to Gertrude's presence. Then he swung about in his chair and addressed the girl.

"I suppose you see a good deal of Jack—on and off—when I'm out?"

"Not—not—sometimes. Only when he has business, I believe."

"Very often"

"No, sir; very seldom."

"Does he ever talk to you about—PERSONAL things?"

Gertrude turned and looked at Scott, her eyes dropped, and her beautiful, dark lashes concealed them.

"No, sir."

"Well, if he should, don't tell him anything."

He got up, walked towards her, speaking low. "Anything about OUR affairs, you know — about those luncheons together—and anything—he wouldn't understand it."

"Nobody does," said the girl with emphasis.

Scott advanced two or three steps at a jump.

"What do you mean; who did you tell about it? Have you told anybody about it?"

"No, but everybody who DOESN'T know seems to take the trouble to warn me not to."

"Everybody's a fool! Has it hurt you any? Is Jack a busy minding everybody's business which is none of their business. By heaven, with all the hypocritical mukking up for saints and dealing out gospel a man can't call his life his own any more. You just listen to them politely—then forget it."

ANOTHER INSULT

He sauntered till he was quite close to her. He bent forward and took her hand. Involuntarily she shrank from him, but he retained his clasp on her.

"You are not afraid of me, little secretary, are you?"

"Oh, Mr. Scott!" she exclaimed as she leaped to her feet. "You shouldn't do that! Really now, you mustn't!"

"Too Busy"

Do You Think Some Day Love May Send in His Card and Find WOMAN "Too Busy?"

BY NELL BRINKLEY

THE girl -THE GIRL- in this stunning age of "Hello!" clear across the continent and "How-dy-do?" across the gray waters from Germany to the Cape Cod coast on the wings of electricity, of "movies," and radium, and the humming dragon-flies above our heads that men are riding in the clear, high shell of the sky, the girl is an amazing young creature, let me tell you. She's up to her neck, all under but her pretty head, in a heap of THE BUSINESS OF THE WORLD. Her pretty fingers are dabbled in everything that a man can do—and the fingers are agile and skilled, too, my friend. And the big thing and the wonder thing is how she keeps the soft kitten femininity of her while she sells real estate or wins her case in the court-room! And still she rides knee to knee with her old friend LOVE. Still she powders her sassy nose and looks at the world with the look in her eyes that whispers, "I am a woman and desirable" from behind the tender-hued veil of romance! BUT some little times the eyes are absent-minded about sentiment—there is no thought or sighing in them of "Ah, me, who shall marry me?" because the head behind them is full of ideas, full of problems and a whirl of effort, dreaming of success, threshing out plans, milling about in the businesses of the world, in the fashion that MAN'S head has had a monopoly on for so long. Yet still she's mighty sweet, and still will she run away for a stroll with Love in the moonlight. BUT do you think it will be that some day Love may send in his card to this great-brained Miss, and have her turn with an unlighted eye from her books and her bottles, her dynamos and her retorts and test tubes—have her turn with the heart in her breast just a cold lump and the light in her eye as cold and no less-looking as the weird green inside of a drug-store at two in the morning, and say, "Tell Eros I'm too busy—can't go to lunch or to business with him now or any other time—altogether too busy with the world's work—shoulder to shoulder with man!"

My word, that'll be a grievous day! But let me whisper you something—the owl on the back of the chair of this broker-lawyer-architect-scientist Miss shuts one eye long and tight! For he t aints it will never be. Not so long as a trickle of Eve's blood runs in the veins of girldom, so long as there is a kinkle of Eve's hair in her head or a single wood-dove note of the first woman's voice in her throat."

The Woman Thou Gavest Me

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

Mary O'Neill's Letter to Martin Conrad

This will be a great grief to you. I would die with a glad heart to save you a moment's pain, yet I could not die at ease if I did not think you would miss me and grieve for me. I like to think that in the time to come people will say, "Once he loved Mary O'Neill, and now there is no other woman in the world for him." I should not be a woman if I did not feel like that—should I?

But don't grieve too much, dearest. Only think! If I had been strong and had years and years still to live, what a life would have been before me—before both of us.

We couldn't have lived apart, could we? And if we had married I should never have been able to shake off the thought that the world, which would always be opening its arms to you, did not want me. That would be so, wouldn't it—after all I have gone through? The world never forgives a woman for the injuries it inflicts on her itself, and I have had too many wounds, darling, to stand by your side and be any help to you.

Oh, I know what you would say, dearest. "She gave up everything for love of me, choosing poverty, obscurity, and pain above wealth and rank and fame, and therefore I will choose her before everything else in the world." But I know what would come to us in the end, dear, and I should always feel that your love for me had dragged you down, closed many of the doors of life to you. I should know that you were always hearing behind you the echoing footsteps of my fate, and that is the only thing I could not bear.

Besides, my darling, there is something else between us. In this world —the Divine Commandment! Our blessed Lord says we can never be man and wife, and there is no getting beyond that, is there?

Yet I think I reproach myself with loving you—that I think it a sin to do so. I do not now, and never shall. He who made my heart knows it is must know that I am doing no wrong.

And don't think I regret that night at Castle Rag. If I have to answer to God for that I will do so without fear, because I know He will know that, when the cruelty and self-seeking of others were trying to control my most sacred impulses, I was only claiming the right He gave me to be mistress of myself and sovereign of my soul.

You must not regret it either, dearest, or reproach yourself in any way, for when we stand together before God's footstool He will see that from the beginning I was yours and you were mine, and He will cover us with the wings of His loving mercy.

Then don't think, dear, that I have ever looked upon what happened afterwards—first in Milan and then in London—as, in any sense, a punishment. I have never done that at any time, and now I believe from the bottom of my heart that, if I suffered while you were away, it was not for my sin but for separation.

Think, dear! If you and I had never met again after my marriage, and if I had gone on living with the man they had married to me, my soul would have withered up and died. That is what happens to the souls of so many poor women who are tortured for life in coarse and degrading husbands. But my soul has not died, dearest, and it is not dying, whatever my poor body may do, so I thank my gracious God for the sweet and pure and noble love that has kept it alive.

All the same my darling, to marry again is another matter. I took my vow before God, dear, and however ignorantly I took it, or under whatever pressure or constraint, it is registered in heaven.

It cannot be for nothing, dear, that our blessed Lord made that stern commandment. The church may have given a wrong interpretation to it—you say it has, and I am too ignorant to dispute—even if I wished to, which I don't. But I am sure my Lord foresaw all such mistakes, and all the hardships that would come to many poor women (perhaps some men, too), as well as the reproach the world might fall to for want of this unyielding rule, when He issued His divine and irrevocable law that never under any circumstances should marriage be broken.

Oh, I am sure of it, dear, quite sure, and before His unsearchable wisdom I bow my head, although my heart is torn.

Yet think, darling, how light is the burden that is laid upon us! Marriage vows are for this world only. The married Lord says we can never be man and wife, and there is no getting beyond that, is there?

You must not regret it either, dearest, or reproach yourself in any way, for when we stand together before God's footstool He will see that from

Do you believe in individual immortality, dear? I do. I believe that in the other life I shall meet and know my dear ones who are in heaven. More than that, I believe that the instant I pass from this life I shall live with my dear ones who are still on earth. That is why I am willing to go—because I am sure that the moment I draw my last breath I shall be standing by your side.

So don't let there be any weeping for me, dear. Nothing is for tears; nothing but well and fair." Always remember that is my creed. I will not say that I could not have wished to live a little longer—if things had been otherwise with both of us. I should like to live to see your book published and your work finished (I know it will be some day) and baby grow up to be a good girl and a beautiful one, too (for that's something, isn't it?), and I should like to live a little longer for another reason, a woman's reason—simply to be loved, and to be told that I am loved, for though a woman may know that, she likes to hear it said and is never tired of hearing it.

But things have gone against us, and it is almost sinfully ungrateful to regret anything when we have so many reasons for thankfulness.

And then about Girlie—I am afraid of that now, because I know I think it would be terrible (for me I mean) to die before she could be old enough to have any clear memory of her mother (such as I have of mine) to cherish and love—only the blank, unfilled by a face, which must be all that remains to most of those whose parents passed away while they were children. But I am not that in the future, when our little girl asks about her mother, you will describe me to her as you are and remember me—and that will be so much sweeter and lovelier than I ever was, and it will be such a joy to think that my daughter sees me through her father's eyes.

Besides, dearest, there is something still more thrilling—the thought that Girlie may grow to be like me in what you think me), and that in the time to come she may startle you with undescribable resemblances in her voice or smile, or laugh, to her mother in heaven, so that some day, perhaps years and years hence, when she is quite grown up, she may touch your arm and you may turn quickly to look at her, and lo! it will seem to you as if Mary herself (your Mary) were by your side. Oh Death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory?

So on with your great work, dearest. Don't let it flag from any feeling that I am lost to you. Whatever you think of me, say to yourself, "Mary is here; love is stronger than death, many waters cannot quench it."

Do you ever read Browning? I have been doing so the last few days, nurse (she is quite a thoughtful woman) having lent me his last volume. When I read the last lines of what is said to have been his last poem I thought of you, dear.

"No, at noonday in the bustle of man's work-time
Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back as either should be,
'Strive and thrive!' Cry 'Speed,—fight on, fare ever
There as here!'

I am going to get up again today, dear, having something to do that is just a little important—to give you this manuscript book, in which I have been writing every day (or rather every night) since you found me in London.

You will see what it is, and why it was written, so I'll say no more on that subject.

I am afraid you'll find it very egotistical, being mainly about myself, but I seem to have been looking into my soul all the time, and when one does that, and gets down to the deep places, one meets all other souls there, so perhaps I have been writing the lives of some women as well.

I once thought I could write a real book (you'll see what vain and foolish things I thought, especially in my darker moments) to show what a woman's life may be when, from any cause whatsoever, she is denied the right God gave her of choosing the best for herself and her children.

There is a dream lying somewhere there, dear, which is stirring the slumber of mankind, but the awakening will not be in my time certainly, and perhaps not even in Girlie's.

And yet, why not?

Do you know, dearest, what it was in your wonderful book which thrilled me most? It was your description of the giant iceberg you found in the Atlantic. One-eighth hundred feet above the surface of the sea and therefore five hundred below it, going steadily on and on, against all the force of tempestuous wind and wave, by power of the current, underneath.

Isn't the movement of all great things in life like that, dearest? So perhaps the world will be a better place for Girlie than it has been for me. And in any case, I shall always feel that, after all and in spite of everything, it has been glorious to be a woman.

* * *

And now, my own darling, though we are only to be separated for a little while, I want to write what should like to say when I part from you tomorrow if I did not know that something in my throat would choke me.

I want to tell you again that I love you dearly, that I have never loved anybody but you, and that no marriage vows will keep me from loving you to the last.

I want to thank you for the real great love you have given me in return—all the way back from the time when I was a child. Oh, my dearest, what have I ever done to deserve the sunshine you have brought into my life—every single day, and night and prayerful hour of it—and dark, but all glorious, hours of your love.

Never allow yourself to doubt my life has not been a noble one. Looking back on it now I see that I have always had happiness in view when I made not had happiness I have had something better—blessedness.

FIRST USE OF RESINOL STOPS TERRIBLE ITCH

When Other Treatments Gave No Relief, Suffered 8 Years, but Resinol Cured in a Week.

Jan. 27, 1914: "I suffered eight years with eczema. It started in one little place and kept spreading until it covered my hands and head. I scratched like mad and burned by fire and peeled off large pieces until they were all raw flesh. I was told it was eczema. It itched and burned so that I could not sleep at night. I tried all sorts of remedies, also one prescription after another but nothing gave me any relief. I noticed Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and after the first application I felt a little relief. I began to get sleep at night. I kept on using them and in a short time I was entirely cured. I have not had a sore spot on me since. I have recommended Resinol to many others and will continue to do so." (Signed) Mrs. Ida Mae Hall, 1000 Dalton St., Atlanta, Ga.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 pounds of healthy, solid "stay there" fat should try eating a little bread with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good health builder. First, weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for three weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel, or what your friends say and think. The replies from the Sargol measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to ten pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And, best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it aids the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich ripe fat producing nourishment for your tissues and helps prepares it in an easily assimilated form, when the blood can readily accept it. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes fat at producing cells. Soon

WHY RICHMOND RESERVE BANK? ASK'S FORBES

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The start made by Senator Williams, McAdoo and Houston in maturating the country's new banking system is not altogether [illegible]. For these main reasons:

1. Too many reserve cities—twelve—have been provided.

2. Intimations are made officially that it is harder-nine maximum allowed under present law—will be increased later.

3. The inclusion of Memphis, the home city of John Sharp Williams, and the exclusion of more important centres in that territory, reveals the personal politics rather than statesmanship.

Financial interests have crept ever since Williams went to Washington that the price of the document has been run not perfected for the benefit of the people but on partisan, pie-bee[illegible] stated by personal considerations. After the recent hubbub at Washington over Mr Williams' and Mr. Munsey Trust Company deal, it was not believed that Secretary McAdoo himself open to fresh declarations. However, he may have recalled that the selection of Tumulty chief of the Russian ambassador made that the famous, and that the least he could do was to add to the fame and financial standing of his own city!

Richmond is NOT a natural reserve city. Its clearings are not half those of New Orleans, for example, and are far below those of Memphis or Houston. Moreover, it is not a great railroad centre. It is not booming industriously like many other Southern cities. Now, however, that Mr. Williams has succeeded in laying an enormous tapeworm under tribute to it—its reserve bank's capital will be much larger than several others—Richmond may prosper at the expense of neighboring cities not fortunate enough to have a favored son at court.

The appearance of Dallas in the list has not been generally expected, but its selection was influenced largely by geographical reasons and is not open to unreserved condemnation.

Atlanta's inclusion was mandatory in view of its location, but its growth and its prospects of enormous growth. Those who, as I do, judge, predict phenomenal expansion for Atlanta, and now that it will become a great banking centre, its future will be brighter than ever.

The Organization Committee errs grievously in encouraging agitation for increasing the number of reserve banks. Its "break" will prevent constant clamor for the realignment of the country's reserve districts. Besides, the principle is wrong—WRONG in capital letters.

My firm belief is that the course, mapped out by the present powers that-be can lead to only one culmination, namely, the abolishment of the multiplicity of district reserve banks and the establishment of one commanding central bank. Only in the scientific solution of our banking problems, and sooner or later science must triumph over politics and partisanship.

Meanwhile the regional system will be given a fair trial. Even those who opposed it most vigorously will rally to its support. Seven cities will become necessary very shortly after the machinery has been started—of that there is no doubt among those who can see clearest and farthest—but the best will be made of the appliances provided.

May I let the cat out of the bag as to New York's intentions?

The aim at Washington, you know, has been to put New York under its thumb bareknee. The whole idea has been to so draw up the new rules that the Federal Reserve Board would have the whip hand. It will appoint a representative to every meeting of each reserve bank. But the local bankers and business men on the bank board will have the naming of the official who will actually run the bank, and New York is to appoint to this position one of its very ablest bankers who will NOT be a figurehead, but will be the real head of the institution. Washington's representative will in practice, be chiefly ornamental.

John Skelton Williams may put fitchmens on the banking map, but neither he nor any one else can wipe the metropolis off it

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The cyclecar adherents are [illegible] ing decidedly interested in the 2-day run under the auspices of the Cyclecar Club of New England, which is echeduled for May 29 and 30 next. Although the date for the run is two months away the committee in charge is already making preparations to bring about a run that will be of exceptional value to the industry and one of great interest to the owner.

There is a slight difference of opinion as to whether or not a two-day run is necessary. Many feel that the same results could be obtained by the holding of a one rather than a two-day event and instead of going to Springfield and returning an equally interesting route could be made to a point nearer Boston that would permit of the outward trip in the morning and the return in the afternoon. How many cars will be ready to make a change in the present schedule if one is found advisable.

George Kimball, of the Henley-Kimball Company, left Boston yesterday for a trip to the Hudson plant in Detroit. Mr. Kimball spent the greater portion of last week in the manufacturing centre and while there secured an addition to his allotment of cars. This, the second increase in the bill and the purpose of his present trip is to secure still further increase in the allotment.

News of local affairs is very often secured away from home. Here is an example of it. The New York Sun of yesterday says: "The truck shows in this country appear to be doomed. There was none in New York this Winter and now that the annual exhibition is closed the sentiment up there is against another one."

The Kelley-Springfield Motor Truck Company received an order from the Pacific Motor Coach Company of Los Angeles for 105 Kelly trucks. According to Local Manager F. Ashman is the largest single order that has ever been given one concern and shows the great advance that has been made in the motor truck field during the last few years.

NEW,

WHY RICHMOND RESERVE BANK? ASKS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The start made by Messrs. Williams, McAdoo and Houston in inaugurating the country's new banking system is not altogether inspiring. For these main reasons:

1. Too many reserve cities—twelve—have been selected.

2. Intimations are made officially that this number—the maximum allowed under the present law—will be increased later.

3. The inclusion of Richmond, the home city of John Skelton Williams, and the exclusion of more important centres in that territory, reveals pretty personal politics rather than statesmanship.

Financial interests have complained ever since Williams went to Washington that the Treasury Department has been run, not primarily for the benefit of the country, but on partisan, pin-headed lines, dictated by personal considerations. After the recent hubbub at Washington over Mr. Williams' part in the Munsey Trust Company deal, it was not believed he would readily lay himself open to fresh criticism. However, he may have recalled that the selection of "Pindell of Peoria" as Russian ambassador made that ilk famous, and that the least he could do was to add to the fame and financial standing of his own city!

Richmond is NOT a natural reserve city. Its clearings are not half those of New Orleans, for example, and are far below those of Galveston and Houston. Moreover, it is not a great railroad centre. It is not booming industriously like so many other Southern cities. Now, however, that Mr. Williams has succeeded in laying an enormous territory under tribute to it—its reserve bank's capital will be much larger than several others—Richmond may prosper at the expense of neighboring cities not fortunate enough to have a favored son at court.

The appearance of Dallas in the list had not been generally expected, but its selection was influenced largely by geographical reasons and is not open to unreserved condemnation.

Atlanta's inclusion was mandatory in view of its location, its importance and its prospects of enormous growth. Those best able to judge, predict phenomenal expansion for Atlanta, and now that it will become a great banking centre, its future will be brighter than ever.

The Organization Committee errs grievously in encouraging agitation for increasing the number of reserve banks. Its "break" will foment constant clamor for the realignment of the country's reserve districts. Besides, the principle is wrong—WRONG in capital letters.

My firm belief is that the course mapped out by the present powers-that-be can lead to only one culmination, namely, the abandonment of the multiplicity of district reserve banks and the establishment of one commanding central bank. That is the scientific solution of our banking problems, and sooner or later science must triumph over politics and partisanship.

Meanwhile the regional system will be given a fair trial. Even those who opposed it most vigorously will rally for its support. Several changes will become necessary very shortly after the machinery has been started—of that there is no doubt among those who can see clearest and farthest—but the best will be made of the appliances provided.

May I let the cat out of the bag as to New York's intentions?

The aim at Washington, you know, has been to put New York under its thumb bankwise. The whole idea has been to so draw up the new rules that the Federal Reserve Board would have the whip hand. It will appoint a representative to oversee the running of each reserve bank. But the local bankers and business men on the bank board will have the naming of the official who will actually run the bank, and New York is to appoint to this position one of its very ablest bankers who will NOT be a figurehead, but will be the real head of the institution. Washington's representative will, in practise, be chiefly ornamental.

John Skelton Williams may put Richmond on the banking map, but neither he nor any one else can wipe the metropolis off it.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The cyclecar adherents are becoming decidely interested in the two-day run under the auspices of the Cyclecar Club of New England, which is scheduled for May 29 and 30 next. Although the date for the run is two months away the committee in charge is already making preparations to bring about a run that will be of exceptional value to the industry and one of great interest to the owner.

There is a slight difference of opinion as to whether or not a two-day run is necessary. Many feel that the same results could be obtained by the holding of a one rather than a two-day outing and instead of going to Springfield and return an equally interesting route could be made to a point nearer to Boston, which would permit of the outward trip in the morning and the return in the afternoon. However, there is yet time to make a change in the present schedule if one is found advisable.

George Kimball, of the Henley-Kimball Company, left Boston yesterday for a trip to the Hudson plant in Detroit. Mr. Kimball spent the greater portion of last week in the manufacturing centre and while there secured an addition to his allotment of cars. This, however, does not fill the bill and the purpose of his present trip is to secure a still further increase in the allotment.

News of local affairs is very often secured away from home. Here is an example of it. The New York Sun of yesterday says: "The truck shows in this country appear to be doomed. There was none in New York this Winter and now that the Boston exhibition is closed the sentiment up there is against another one."

The Kelley-Springfield Motor Truck Company received an order from the Pacific Motor Coach Company of Los Angeles for 105 Kelly trucks. This, according to Local Manager P. S. Aultman is the largest single order that has ever been given one concern and shows the great advance that has been made in the motor truck field during the last few years.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak this afternoon, the reaction which began in the first hour not being followed by a rally. Markets were quiet during the morning and over the noon period, and later in New York declines included Canadian Pacific ¾, Southern Pacific ¼, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading ¾, Lehigh Valley ¼, New Haven ¾, American ⅜, Steel ⅛, Amalgamated ⅜, American Smelting ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛, and Union Pacific ¼. American Telephone was up ¼ and Studebaker 1.

In Boston recessions were also general and among losses were Boston & Maine 1, New Haven ⅝, Calumet & Arizona ½, Granby ⅜ and Mohawk ¼. American Telephone was up ¼ and Alaska Gold ⅜.

PRICES STEADY AT START.

Prices were steady when the New York market opened, but the volume of business was small. Traders appeared to be hesitant and bears said the upward movement had culminated. There seemed to be an increased supply of stocks. One of the early reports from Washington was that Interstate Commerce Commissioners decided after a conference to hasten their decision on the freight rate case. Belief is spreading that they will grant some increase to Eastern roads, and many think it will be all that was asked for. Railroads are said to expect the decision by May 1. One statement is that Senators closest in touch with interstate trade expect that it will be favorable to the roads. That an increase will cause an advance in market quotations no one questions. The argument is over how much prices will rise, and if stocks will stay long on a higher level should equipment buying by roads fail to greatly stimulate the steel and many other industries. Big and little business is waiting an answer through developments.

MISSOURI PACIFIC WEAK.

Missouri Pacific was the weakest of prominent rails at the opening, declining a point in short order. It recovered part of the loss and then sagged more. Weakness in this issue was due to authoritative denials of the rumor that Rockefeller interests were dickering with the Goulds for control of the road. It was said this morning:

"Interests close to the Missouri Pacific management declared the Rockefeller interest dropped out of the deal which was contingent on financing the $25,000,000 Missouri Pacific notes maturing in June. The overtures did not reach the stage where any option or price had been named on the Gould holdings."

During the first hour, when transactions totalled less than 67,000 shares, prices eased off. Declines were mostly fractional, but they were numerous. There was nothing in events of the morning to explain the drop. Americans had a good undertone in London, where there has been some quiet accumulation of such securities of late. While that list continued irregular it showed more gains than losses. There was more talk of a further reduction of the Bank of England's minimum rate of discount. The money tendency abroad is towards cheaper rates.

TREND BECOME UNCERTAIN.

The price trend continued uncertain in the second hour and this, combined with dullness, tended to depress sentiment. Coppers were not so firm, although metal statistics have been so reassuring of late. An early London cablegram stated that all producers were asking 14.70 cents a pound there for electrolytic. A later one said that Amalgamated was quoting 14.75 cents for April delivery and 14.80 for May and June.

There was not much business in New Haven and it eased off. An interesting statement from Hartford is that it is doubtful if former Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley of Connecticut, who led the Massachusetts court fight to prevent the road from issuing debenture bonds for $67,000,000, attends the meeting of New Haven stockholders, scheduled for April 21, to consider the government's plan for dissolution of the system. He is president of the Aetna Life Insurance Company and he said his company had sold 5,000 shares of New Haven stock within ten days at about $70 a share.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Because Pere Marquette defaulted upon interest upon bonds amounting to $5,000,000, foreclosure proceedings have been begun against the road in a Federal court at Detroit.

The London copper warrants market was easier this morning and by noon spot and futures were each 2s. 6d. lower.

The annual report of the Cunard Steamship Company shows profits of $6,383,975 and its board has declared a dividend of 10 per cent.

The Island Creek Coal Company's report for 1913 shows profits of $735,712, compared with 772,489 for 1912.

The Texas & Pacific road is one of the few roads to report gains for February, its gross increasing $67,099, and its net $60,007. For eight months the gain in gross was $432,159 and in net $696,553.

Denver & Rio Grande reports for February a decrease of $191,840 in gross and of $15,165,475 in net.

It is understood by a local financial publication that New Haven will get more than $1,000,000 in cash soon through the sale of its interest in the Merchants & Miners Steamship Line. The railroad controlled 51 per cent. of the steamship stock. "It is generally believe," it is stated, "that Baltimore interests paid about $40 per share, which would mean an overturn of $1,000,000 in cash and a loss to the New Haven Railroad in this investment of fully $1,500,000 not counting the loss due to suspension of dividends."

Patriotic Americans Have Just Begun to Fight

The Surrender of a Few Patronage Grabbing Congressmen to Great Britain Does Not Mean That the People Have Surrendered

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

The pitiful surrender to Great Britain of the timid patronage hunters in the House of Representatives was not an inspiring spectacle. But do not for a minute imagine that it means the surrender of the American people.

The group of Democratic Congressmen who deserted the leaders of the party and violated the party platform in order to help the President please the English government are about as representative of the American people as the Tories in the colonies were representative of the men who fought and won the Revolution.

In all parts of the country mass meetings have been held attended by thousands of citizens who protested forcibly against the abandonment of American independence.

The people are just awakening to what is going on in Washington. The stirring speech of Speaker Clark did not avail against a bound and gagged parcel of frightened Administration Democrats. But it will be read and approved by the American people.

The firm stand of Oscar W. Underwood and the other important Democrats in the House will be applauded in the North as well as in the South.

Such a fight as those two men made cannot be made in vain. The same kind of a fight was made at Bunker Hill. There, as in the House, the British won a victory that cost them a war.

It may be a month or two before the decisive battle of patriotic Americans against British arrogance is fought in the Senate. In that space of time real American sentiment will make itself heard in Washington.

The Administration has used up all its British supplied ammunition. The people, like Paul Jones, when asked by the British commander if he had struck his colors, can reply, "We have just begun to fight."

We know now, thanks to the President's recent fit of frankness, that his plea that he needed Congress' help to ward off foreign complications was idle.

We have his own word that he has asked and expects no return for his proposed sacrifice of the right of this country to profit by the canal which the people built and paid for.

WE KNOW THAT THERE IS NO REASON WHATEVER FOR SURRENDERING TO GREAT BRITAIN, ASIDE FROM THE DETERMINATION OF THE PRESIDENT TO FORCE THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO SHARE HIS FRIENDSHIP FOR THAT COUNTRY.

The fight has been transferred to the Senate. Fortunately Senators hereafter WILL BE ELECTED BY POPULAR VOTE. They will be as close to the people as the members of the House of Representatives, and they will respond even more readily to the popular demand that they act like Americans and not like Tories.

As American citizens it now becomes your duty to make your Senators understand the situation.

Before the time comes for the final vote the members of the House who were faithless to their country will be marked men.

The favor they have gained from the Administration will be but poor compensation for the contempt of their constituents.

Make your Senator understand that you now must trust in him to uphold your rights.

Tell him what you think of the Congressmen who deserted you, and that you do not want to think the same thing of HIM.

Ask him to forget the little squabbles over patronage which demean any public man, and to join forces with men like Clark and Underwood in a real battle for American independence.

There will be no gag-rule in the Senate. The fight there will be long and severe. BUT THE REAL FIGHT WILL COME BEFORE THE SENATE EVEN BEGINS TO TALK ABOUT THE BILL.

This will be your fight. Whether your country or Great Britain wins depends on YOU. Go into it as your forefathers went into the long struggle for independence, and you will keep the liberty that they won for you.

THANKS FROM THE WOMAN'S MUNICIPAL LEAGUE OF BOSTON

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—At the last meeting of the housing committee of the Woman's Municipal League a vote was passed asking me to express the appreciation and thanks of the league for the assistance which the Boston AMERICAN has given to our effort to prevent dark and damp cellars from being used for sleeping purposes.

I am, very sincerely yours,

(MRS. FREDERICK T. LORD.)

Chairman of Press Committee, Woman's Municipal League.

COULD THE GOVERNMENT OWN AND MANAGE THE RAILROADS?

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I have just finished reading your article on "Could the Government Own and Manage the Railroads?" I was in Germany last year and you should see the difference in railroads there and our own. First, they have excellent roadbeds, splendid depots, the best service, and charges rates than we have. This shows what Germany can do and I have no doubt but that the American government is just as able to do the same. I am glad you have the courage to show up this broad daylight robbery. They are trying to put the blame on the price of labor, which shows that they hate to see the producer even have enough to live on.

This plundering and getting the best of the producer I hope has had its day. Being an employer of labor myself, I can see what is right and wrong, and there are millions like me, and if it takes the press to present our views and show up the wrongdoers and blood-suckers. They claim that the wage-earner is the cause of it all. If it can be said, but who have the millions? Is it the small business men? No. Let us hope to see the day when we will have more salaried middlemen than there are now, for unless things change we will have only the rich and poor, which is not natural.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLVII.

WHEN Julia Marvin left the manager's office to return to her position at the lace counter the big, partistic store looked almost lovely to her. Yet she had heretofore often come near hating it. Now it was a different place. It was where she had put her best efforts, and this morning she had learned for the first time that these efforts had been appreciated. Next Monday she was to be promoted to the position of head saleswoman of the lace department, with the prospect in sight of further advance.

The manager, a cool, businesslike young man, had been most kind to her and had said pleasant things about her work, adding that the firm recognized faithful service. At the beginning of the interview he had seemed rather patronizing, the girl thought, but he had concluded the conversation by actually asking her advice.

"Miss Marvin," he said, rather abruptly, just before dismissing her, "it's none of my business to wonder why a person of your ability should have taken such a position as you began with here in this store. For you have ability, as you must realize. I would rather like to ask your opinion concerning our lace department—that is, what changes you would make if you were running it entirely to suit yourself."

Julia flushed at the spoken and implied compliment, but she answered frankly and directly. "There are several changes that I would make, since you ask me," she said, "although I would never have thought of suggesting them otherwise. In the first place, Baird handles an unusually fine assortment of lace, and there ought to be better facilities for displaying it—more forms, cases, etc. Then it seems to me that it ought to be featured more in the advertisements. But, of course," she added, blushing still more, "that is only my individual opinion, and may be worthless."

"Your opinion was what I asked for," the manager assured her. "Go on, please. What else?"

"Well, there's another thing I've noticed," the girl continued, with returning confidence. "I don't think this store chooses the most effective kind of advertising. I have noticed other 'ads,' and I believe we'd get more custom if the prices of sales in this store were made interesting and less like mere business announcements. Of course, the Baird method is the old, dignified one, but do you think it really compares well with the way in which other places call attention to their specialties? Of course, I know very little about the machinery of advertising, but I have watched to see what people read in the newspapers on the cars and in other public places. The thing that attracts their attention quickly is always read first."

The manager looked at her gravely for a moment, then he smiled kindly.

"Thank you, Miss Marvin. Perhaps you are right. I might add that what you have said to me is just what I have been trying to drive home ever since I took charge of this work. It is pleasant to see that some one else who observes indorses my views. It is rather strange, however, that you should take so much interest in the store. It isn't the usual attitude of saleswomen, especially of those who have been here as short a time as you have been with us."

"It ought to be the attitude of every saleswoman," Julia insisted warmly. "I consider that a part of my work. Since I am getting my living by this place, I think I ought to put the best I have into it. Is that all? Good morning, then, and thank you."

* * *

The manager watched her as she left the office. "That young woman's going up pretty fast, if I'm any prophet," he muttered. "We've never had anything like her here before. She has all the elements of success—brains, common sense, the gift of observation, perseverance and grit. Yes, she'll win out, no matter where she locates."

The day had dawned clear and warm, but by three o'clock the rain began to fall heavily and continued through the entire afternoon, with an occasional lifting of the clouds that made those not versed in the signs of the weather declare that it was going to "clear off." When the hour of closing came the rain was increasing. Julia, with a dozen other girls, stood for a few minutes in the vestibule of the employes' entrance watching the dimpling sidewalk, and waiting for a lull in the storm, that she might run to a car. At last, noting by the gathering dusk that the downpour was to continue all night, she buttoned her jacket closely about her and pushed through the swinging doors and out into the driving rain.

She had taken only a few steps when a tall figure in a long raincoat and dark golf-cap stepped in front of her, and, without any parley, hurried her into a waiting taxicab. Then Kelley Delaine, smiling happily, gave the chauffeur his hurried directions, stepped into the cab and seated himself beside her.

"Here we are!" he proclaimed boyishly. "It's a wild night for us poor sailors—isn't it?"

"Mr. Delaine!" exclaimed Julia, trying to look severe in spite of her inclination to smile. "you shouldn't have done this!"

"But I didn't," he corrected her. "It was a kind Providence who sent the rain, and, since that matter was not in my hands, I had to do the best I could to keep you from getting wet."

"But I shouldn't let you do things of this kind for me," Julia objected.

"You didn't let me," Delaine remarked. "I have kidnapped you. And I have every right to do it, too, Miss Marvin," he said, suddenly serious. "If I'm to be your friend, it's my privilege to help you in any way I can. Please let's close the ledger of favors received and given. I knew that you must have come off this morning without an umbrella—for it was clear then. Yesterday you told me you knew I was your friend. If you believe that still, you must see that taking you as dry as possible is the least I can do. You would have been soaked if you had walked to a car. There is nothing much wetter than rain.

Sudden drops that were not from the rain gathered in Julia's eyes.

"It was very good of you to think about me and go to all this trouble for me," she said softly.

"That's what friends are for," answered Kelley Delaine.

What Is Woman's Real Business in the World?

By EDWIN MARKHAM

MR. EDWARD SANDFORD MARTIN, from a rather conservative standpoint, discusses the feminine agitation that is one of the currents merging in the large onward social movement of the time. His book he calls "The Unrest of Women." Here is an extract from the opening chapter:

"Girls have a wider choice than they used to have. Besides the old-time callings of dressmaking, millinery, teaching school and getting married, they can—let's see, let's see—work in factories, laundries, stores; be cashiers; be stenographers or typewriters; be trained nurses or doctors; be telephone girls, indispensable office workers, actresses, writers, librarians, social workers, deans and presidents of colleges; or go into some other business not done at home.

* * *

"The wisdom of mothers, a body of knowledge derived from instinct, experience and observation, and of enormous value to human life, is a good deal baffled by them. Indeed it is a current doctrine that the live-at-home mothers are not up to the task of looking after all these out-working girls, and that the law—the government—must undertake it.

"The girls as they come along and see this great body of out-working women say to themselves: 'That is what woman's life is coming to be. That is what I must face and prepare for. The old domestic life of housekeeping is going the way of the distaff. What is important now for me is to be qualified to hold a worth-while place in this new life that is, and is to be.'

"Lawyers' offices are full of women, extremely competent and useful, but there are but few women lawyers; there are many trained nurses, but comparatively few women doctors; there are girls galore on the floors of the department stores, and some women hold excellent positions in them; but a woman in the firm is a rarity. Women are admirable helpers in business, cheaper than men, more tractable, often more agreeable; but they do not stand on the same level with men in these undomestic employments.

* * *

"What is the reason?

"The reason is this: That all this is to man his vocation, but to woman at large no more than her avocation. Her great vocation is motherhood.

"It is in that that she is indispensable and unrivalled; and in that is the basis of her complete equality with man. In that she is the principal, not only in bearing children, but in rearing and training them, as well.

"That is by so much the most important calling to which women must look forward, that for the general run of women all the other employments are of negligible moment in comparison with it, and have to be considered on a basis of their relation to it. To that calling the great mass of women in due time find their way.

* * *

"They marry and have children. The extraparietal wage-earning work, some of them do before marriage may be compared with the years of military service which young men have to give in France and Germany.

"It is a temporary employment, necessary and often very valuable as a training, but in a field of endeavor from which they expect to withdraw as soon as they can.

"To marry and have children and raise them is the natural destiny of women; the same now that it always was and always will be. It is for that, primarily, that girls should be trained; to that they should be encouraged to look forward; and their training should be such as will help them to marry wisely, to have children that are worth raising, and to raise them well."

Stars and Stripes

"A husband for every woman" is the platform of an Illinois Congressional candidate. That's equivalent to giving her the vote.

Pavlowa injures one of her $200,000 feet, but she still may dance the one-step and have $100,000 left.

Dollar a word it costs to curse in Cleveland. And it's almost a necessity in Cleveland.

Truly, as Byron says: "History with all her volumes vast Hath but one Page."

We have a larger army along the Rio Grande than we had before Santiago in the Spanish War. To keep the Mexicans in order? No, to prevent Americans from recovering their property by chasing bandits across the border.

The Art of Becoming Popular

Ambition to Be Popular, if Prompted by Purity of Purpose, Calls for Nobility of Character and Kindness of Heart

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

TO be popular in the world of art is, according to the canons of the "high-brow critic," to be a dweller outside of the inner sanctuary.

Yet the Sermon on the Mount is popular.

Whatever possesses all the qualities of real greatness must be popular, even though things which possess no qualities of greatness may be widely popular also.

The large majority of people may like something mediocre, and only few may like something which contains many of the elements of greatness—something too fine for the masses to comprehend—but that which possesses ALL the elements of greatness must reach and grip the whole race. For, among these elements, simplicity and sympathy must be counted, those opening wedges to all minds.

The human being who is popular is sometimes accused of being all things to all men, and there is a cant phrase much in vogue among the unpopular about "caring only for a few people and being cared for by only a few." And this serves frequently as an easy excuse for the unpopularity of the dull or the disagreeable.

To be a popular individual in any community of self-respecting and morally disposed citizens, and to grow in popularity with acquaintance and time, calls for nobility of character, purity of purpose and kindness of heart.

It calls also for tact, for discretion, for good judgment, for unselfishness, for generosity, for amiability and the power to bring out the best in others. It calls for a heart big enough to rejoice in the achievements of others. It calls for the elimination of all jealousy, all tendencies to gossip, all impulses to be indolent, or indifferent, or self-centred.

Therefore, it would seem that an ambition to be popular is at the same time an ambition to become a worth-while individual and a practical Christian.

The man who sets out to be a great discoverer in science, or a great creator in the world of art, may not have the time to become a popular man in his own social circle. But, if he is decidedly unpopular, he is sure to lack some of the large elements of character which are necessary to bring him to the summit of the heights he seeks. Unless he is liked and respected by those who know him best something is amiss with the man.

There is a cheap and temporary popularity which comes from the ability to amuse others, from the propensity to be generous, to the limit of extravagance, and to be ever ready with unmeaning flattery, but the reign of these social leaders and lions is always brief.

Sincerity and tact are two qualities which make for lasting popularity.

Sincerity in thought and purpose, tact in the application of that virtue.

The tactful person knows when and how to be silent.

Many sincere individuals think a brutal expression of the most unpleasant and disagreeable opinions is an evidence of their sincerity. But the tactful man or woman knows when to speak and when to be still and how to change a topic of conversation when some one has trodden on delicate ground.

The woman who desires to be popular should first of all learn the charm which lies in listening well, and she should cultivate the art of drawing others out, of making those with whom she is thrown shine to their best advantage.

If a man talks well and has fun to converse; if his singing will induce him to sing; and to bring forth the most attractive qualities and accomplishments of her women friends is a sure way for any woman to take a long step forward on the road to popularity.

Such a woman, possessing no marked accomplishments herself, and without beauty or great mental gifts, stands a far better chance of becoming popular than the self-conscious Venus, or the prodigy of brilliant attainments, who only enjoys herself when occupying the centre of the social stage and basking in the glare of the spotlight.

Unselfishness, then, is the keynote to popularity, as it is the key to the highest moral worth. But this unselfishness must be mingled with good sense, with tact, with delicacy and refinement, in order to serve as an aid to popularity.

Without these ingredients unselfishness and generosity sometimes become obtrusive, officious, and offensive.

The most perfect type of popular woman is she who can shine like the sun when sunshine is needed, yet who, like that orb, does not always shine, but retires behind the clouds and calls attention to the brilliancy of the stars and the moon. One who can be entertaining, or amusing, or instructive, as occasion demands, but who can always put herself in the background in order to exhibit the graces and charms of others, and who is ever ready to rejoice in another's success without any belittling clause affixed to praise.

One who can be tolerant of the ideas and opinions of others, while holding strongly opposite ones; and who knows how to hold fast to her own ideals while understanding how others may fall to do so.

The popular woman has quick perception, and, however great her vogue, she is never blinded by conceit to such an extent that she fails to perceive her own faults or neglects correcting them once she sees them.

That which she finds disagreeable in others she decides to avoid doing herself.

And those graces and qualities which appeal to her in others she cultivates.

To seek popularity for the sake of being popular means the undermining of character.

To seek it through a desire to be a benefit, a pleasure and a comfort to humanity means the building of character.
